To Feminists, Voluntarism Is Doubly Cursed

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON and LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writers

If the Good Samaritan were around today, he'd be under the gun.

In recent years, the Good Samaritanism of America's 50 million service volunteers has been subjected to attack from several quarters.

Most notably, some labor unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO, and feminist organizations have taken shots at the venerable institution of voluntarism.

These organizations have concluded that despite the good that volunteers do, their presence may be more a curse than a blessing.

For the feminists, it's a two-sided curse.

Agreeing with the posture assumed by some labor unions, the National Organization for Women (NOW) has said that volunteers, by offering their services free, eliminate potential jobs.

Volunteers who do clerical work, help with staff recreation programs, answer telephones, etc. for schools, health centers and public service agencies are giving employers a free out, critics say.

"If there were no volunteers available to do necessary work, the next budget would have to include more positions," said a NOW position paper written in 1971.

Further, the position paper says that voluntarism (political voluntarism excluded) perpetuates the "second-class status of women."

Women Do More

According to statistics from the Office of Voluntary Action, women, who make up 51% of the population, account for 59% of the volunteer force.

And women volunteers "as everywhere else, play subordinate, supporting roles, always deferring to male authority," NOW claims.

Voluntarism "has kept large numbers of capable women out of the labor market," all the while giving them "an illusion of participation in the world at large," NOW says.

On the other side of the controversy are those who say that voluntarism should be encouraged for philosophical and practical reasons.

In a country where freedom of choice is, at least in theory, held sacred, one must have the right to volunteer if he or she chooses, they say.

From the practical standpoint, they argue that many of the services performed by volunteers would be eliminated or greatly curtailed if employers were forced to pay for these services.

And that, they believe, would result in a less humane society.

Some Agencies Would Die

Susan Jackson, director of the Volunteer Bureau of Lincoln, said some social service agencies — such as Personal Crisis Service and Y-Pals — would cease to exist if volunteer help was not available.

Last year, volunteers placed through the bureau logged more than 20,000 hours of service, Mrs. Jackson said.

Calculating those hours at the minimum wage, their monetary value would be $42,000. That, however, is misleading, since professional persons, men and women alike, serve in voluntary capacities.

For the most part, volunteers fill gaps which service agencies cannot afford to staff, Mrs. Jackson said.

When an agency requests volunteer help, Mrs. Jackson considers whether or not a paid staff member could or should perform the job in question.

"If I feel that someone should be paid for that task, I suggest that to the agency and don't actively recruit volunteers," she said.

At Lincoln General Hospital, 300 volunteers put in from 8 to 20 hours a month per person, providing a substantial "savings for the hospital," said Liz Wolth, director of volunteers.

That "savings" amounts to an average of $9,000 monthly, based on the minimum wage.

Many Of Long Standing

"I suppose some of them (the jobs volunteers perform) could have been paid positions," she continued, "but they were started years ago." Most of the volunteers "hardly ever take that into consideration."

"Many of the services would have to be discontinued, or staff would have to be hired to do them" if volunteers were not available, said Mrs. Evelyn Adams.

Mrs. Adams, director of volunteer services at Bryan Memorial Hospital, said volunteers put in about 1,500 hours at the hospital each month.

Volunteer directors at Lincoln hospitals and nursing homes agree that if additional staff had to be hired, patient or resident fees would go up.

In the Lincoln Public Schools, volunteers provide a "supportive" function for teachers, according to Patsy Lawrie, volunteer coordinator for the Lincoln Public Schools.

The schools could "never get the kind of funding that would release the teacher" to pursue the one-to-one contact with students, that volunteers make possible, Mrs. Lawrie said.

Neither the Lincoln Education Association (LEA) nor the Lincoln chapter of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) has taken a position on voluntarism — and how it affects paid employment opportunities — in the schools.

AFT President Grateful

Amy Birky, president of the Lincoln AFT chapter and a teacher at Meadow Lane, said she is "thankful" for volunteer assistance she has gotten in the classroom.

"I know I could never do without them," she said. However, she added, "there's no question volunteers take jobs away."

Federally-funded educational programs such as Head Start and Follow Through use volunteers as a matter of necessity, said Mrs. Mary Ann DePrenger, coordinator of federal programs in the Lincoln Public Schools.

In order to get funding for such programs, a school system must provide "in kind" service — donated material or volunteer hours.

The state may owe countless of its employees, and former employees, back wages for overtime they worked but were never paid for, the Nebraska Association of Public Employees said Sunday.

"We would be talking about a sum in the neighborhood of $8 million to $10 million," according to Doug Marti, attorney for NAPE.

NAPE plans to hold a news conference Tuesday to announce it is filing a claim on behalf of two former state employees, who contend overtime they were not compensated for exceeds a combined total of $5,000, Marti said.

Injunction May Be Sought

Marti also said NAPE may seek an injunction to prevent any state records that could be pertinent to such claims from being destroyed.

"We assume the State of Nebraska keeps records a reasonable length of time, going at least five years back," Marti said.

Exon administration officials said they were unaware of any specific claim planned, but acknowledged receipt of a potentially far reaching attorney general's opinion on the subject of state employee overtime.

"The full ramifications of the attorney general's opinion haven't been examined, so there are still a lot of unanswered questions," said Norman Otto, Gov. J. J. Exon's administrative assistant.

Maybe Not All Covered

"We don't know exactly what is covered by the opinion; it might just be some agencies and not all state employees," Otto said.

The opinion, dated April 8, was prepared at Otto's request.

"That opinion was requested because of a situation involving an assistant fire marshal, Paul Thien, who was killed last year," Otto said.

Thien's estate filed a claim for overtime for which he allegedly had not been compensated.

Until a change in federal law that took effect last year, most state employees did not receive overtime pay, but were allowed to accumulate compensatory time off.

Timing Dealt With

A key portion of the attorney general's opinion dealt with whether state employees could lose their compensatory time off if they did not take it within 120 days after it was earned.

Under regulations previously used by the state, an employee could take compensating time off after it was approved by a supervisor. If it was not approved within 120 days, it was lost and the employee could not have his time off.

Otto asked if withholding compensatory time off under those regulations was permissible.

The opinion, written by Deputy Atty. Gen. Harold S. Salter, said it was not.

'Plenty Of Claims' Possible

"Anyone can see what they could mean," Marti said. "All that lapsed comp time would have to be paid for in cash, and our feeling is that there might be room for plenty of claims by current and former state employees."

Otto had asked the State Justice department what appropriate action would be regarding hours credited prior to adoption of the rules and regulations in Nov. 1, 1970.

The opinion answered: "Payment for last two years at salary in effect at time of earning overtime."

Person Doesn't Need Record

The opinion contained another item that could affect future claims. It said it was not necessary to have a record that would prove overtime had in fact been authorized.

That means state employees would not have to provide some written record or other authorization to show that overtime they worked had been authorized. Since there presumably are few such records, a lack of them would likely have helped the state in combatting claims, Marti noted.

Marti disagreed with one portion of the opinion, which said no claim against the state is valid unless filed within two years after the claim arises.

"We find it grossly unfair to impose a statute of limitations in such cases, because most of the employees didn't and don't even know that it exists," Marti said.

Otto said he believed that currently state employees are given their compensating time off or overtime within the pay period after they receive it.

CRANDALL... next to dealer, challenges winner Roberts, left, Hooks.

'Sailor' World Poker Champ

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The new "world champion of poker" says he would rather play bridge or chess.

"Poker is not my favorite," said Brian "Sailor" Roberts after winning the title late Saturday night. But he admitted he played it for one simple reason: "Money."

Roberts migrated to Las Vegas from San Angelo, Tex., in the 1960s.

Middle-aged, overweight and bulging with suppressed humor, Roberts won a $115,000 hand from Bob Hooks of Dallas on a pair of jacks. He walked away with the $210,000 grand prize which represented the buy-ins of 21 entrants — $10,000 each — when the contest started Tuesday.

Hooks went away empty-handed, as did the other 19 players.

Roberts survived the first day of play with only $1,300. But he came back slowly and steadily while former champions in the seven-year series went broke one after another. These included four-time winner Johnny Moss of Odessa, Tex.; Walter Claude "Puggy Wuggy" Pearson of Tennessee, and Thomas Austin "Amarillo Slim" Preston, perhaps professional poker's most colorful character.

Hooks explained that he was getting so low on chips he had to do something brave.

In "Hold 'em" poker played at the championship, each player is dealt two cards face down. Three cards are dealt face up in the center of the table. As betting progresses, two more cards are dealt face up. Each such deal is called a "flop."

In the final hand, Roberts got a pair of jacks face down. Hooks got the nine and jack of clubs.

Hooks bet heavily. Roberts raised him. Hooks raised Roberts again.

In the "flop" came a nine and a ten, neither a club.

Hooks lost.

Explained Hooks later, "I just needed a club. I knew he had some kind of a hand but I didn't feel I was dead."

"I was lucky I came as far as I did," Hooks added. "A nicer guy couldn't have won."

City Eyes Shopping Center Issue

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

Star Staff Writer

Once again city officials are grappling with the question of where Lincoln's next regional shopping center should be located.

The continuing controversy over the location of a shopping center surfaced last week in City-County Planning Commission discussions on the Comprehensive Plan.

An emerging issue in the debate is how to protect downtown retailers from further erosion and in the process curb Gateway Shopping Center's mushrooming growth.

Major Competitor

Gateway, located between 58th and 66th on O St., already is downtown's major competitor. And the center is getting bigger, perhaps too big, some say.

Planning commissioners, some city officials and consultants are suggesting it's time for the city to do something about it.

When Gateway opened in 1960, it covered 250,000 square feet of retail floor space. Fifteen years later, stores consume 780,000 square feet and, according to consultant Bob Teska, "is going toward a million."

Although retailers agree downtown is "vibrant" and healthy, there has been an erosion in sales over the last ten years. Shoppers have been going to Gateway in increasing numbers instead.

The 1974 Hammer-Siler-George economic report said downtown's share of the county's shoppers good sales had been cut in half from 71% to 36%. Over the same ten-year period Gateway increased its sales four-fold.

Threat Of Decline

The threat of continuing decline prompted city officials to join forces with businessmen in 1973 to form the Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) which formulated a Lincoln Center development plan. Now officials want to give the Lincoln Center plan time to work.

A bulging Gateway and construction of a new regional shopping center in the near future could hamper those downtown redevelopment efforts, DAC members said.

Maintenance of a dominant central business district is the crux of the emerging Comprehensive Plan. The preliminary land-use plan calls for growth around Lincoln Center to the north, south and west before full-scale eastward expansion.

To insure a strong downtown, most of the commissioners think the next regional shopping center should be built at 56th and Old Cheney Rd. Commissioners argue that a center on 56th would compete with Gateway, not downtown. That location would draw shoppers into Lincoln from southeast Nebraska, who now motor down the road to Omaha.

Several other officials, including commissioner James Hacker, say the 56th location is a bummer. They want to designate an area around 27th and Pine Lake Rd. for the next regional center.

Growth Question

Hacker has argued that a 650,000 square foot center at 56th would spur undesired eastward development, while the same-sized center built in the 27th vicinity would spur desired westward and southern growth.

Inherent in the argument of which place is best is the issue over whether the city should place a center in a more developed area, which has the market, or place it in a less developed area to attract a market.

Many commissioners apparently believe a shopping center should be placed at 56th because there are sufficient shoppers in the area to guarantee business success.

Several successful retailers seem to disagree. Bob Magee, president of Magee's clothing stores in downtown and at Gateway, said some businessmen felt Gateway would flop because "it was built in a cornfield."

'Now Look'

"Now look at all the houses to the east of 56th," said DAC member Magee of the housing developments which have sprung up since Gateway was built.

Another downtown merchant, Sam Marchese of Brandeis, believes shopping centers act as magnets to growth.

Brandeis, which was denied zoning for a shopping center at 27th and Old Cheney Rd. last year, still is seeking a suburban site to build a branch store. Marchese said Brandeis is interested in a south Lincoln location.

The Hammer-Siler-George report suggests the city could support a regional center on Lincoln's south side by 1980 without seriously hurting the downtown if downtowners get busy and spruce up the area.

Redevelopment of the CBD was one of the major reasons the City Council rejected three shopping center applications last year.

Wouldn't Be Hindrance

Marchese still thinks a center wouldn't hamper downtown redevelopment efforts.

"We have a multi-million dollar investment downtown. We're not interested in branching out to hurt our downtown store," he said.

Magee believes that for downtown merchants to regain some of the market lost, West Lincoln and the Belmont area will have to be built up.

"There's nothing worse than a blighted downtown and having abandoned shopping centers around town," he said.

'I've Lost My Husband'

Charleston, W. Va. (UPI) —

The woman was ready to cry.

"I've lost my husband," she told the hostess at a restaurant.

State Police were called and a search began for The Rev. Jack Reed, 44, of Lynchburg, Va.

Reed, unaware police were looking for him, was driving along the wrong highway, heading in the wrong direction.

The Reeds were reunited Saturday and back on the road to Indiana, where he has a new assignment. Before they left here they told of a frightening 13-hour separation, caused by rain and fog as they traveled through West Virginia.

Neither had any idea where the other was, and until police got into the act the couple had no way of finding out.

The Reeds set out from Lynchburg, he in a rented truck loaded with furniture, she in the family car. It was raining, foggy and dark on W. Va. 20.

Mrs. Reed turned onto the West Virginia Turnpike, as she was supposed to, and headed for Charleston. But her husband, following her with visibility "near zero," missed the turnpike entrance and stayed on 20.

When the rain began to clear, the woman discovered the truck was no longer following. She continued on the turnpike to Charleston, walked into a restaurant and told of her dilemma. State Police looked for Reed and finally found him in Princeton, 90 miles from here.

Guam Refugee Situation Resembles Boiling Kettle

By DICK WILLIAMS
Agana, Guam (UPI) — The refugee situation on Guam resembles a boiling kettle — if there isn't some relief soon, the lid may blow.

Three weeks ago, when the refugees first started arriving in the American island territory, it was predicted that there would be a maximum of 50,000 to be housed temporarily, with no more than 24,000 living on Guam at one time.

Tuesday afternoon the 100,000th refugee disembarked from the chartered U.S. merchant vessel Sgt. Andrew Miller.

Approximately half of them already had been flown to reception centers elsewhere, but the other 50,000 refugees were saturating the island's facilities.

The tent city at Orote Point, at first expected to hold a maximum of 24,000 persons, has since been expanded to accommodate twice that number.

Open Field Of Pens
It now has 3,490 tents, erected in what Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo described as "nothing more than an open field of pens."

There are still 2,800 other refugees in the Philippines, who will have to be sent somewhere, plus another 2,000 off Singapore, who have been ordered to leave.

"I don't know if I'll get any of those people," Rear Adm. George S. Morrison said, "but I'm getting ready for them just in case."

The admiral, who hopes to retire Aug. 1, said 52,000 refugees "is just about all we can handle and still not endanger or inconvenience the local population."

The refugees are being flown to the U.S. mainland at the rate of 600 per day. At that rate it will be three to four months before Orote tent city can be closed.

The makeshift city has eight field kitchens to feed 40,000 people, who must stand in long lines for hours to get a hot meal of rice and meat. By the time they get back to their tent the meal is no longer hot.

There are 191 toilets for the refugees at Orote and 300 showers. There isn't a great deal of privacy in the showers, and the toilets are of the same type used by troops in Vietnam — 55 gallon drums cut in half and built over privies.

The privies have presented a problem of sanitation. Now they are being treated with lime and other chemicals and Morrison said the sanitation problem "is being licked."

Stink Lingers On
"But we will still have a cosmetic (odor) problem as long as the camp is there," he said.

Some of the refugees just don't bother taking the long walk to the privies and back. Residents of the nearby Navy housing area are complaining of the camp odors when the wind blows the wrong direction.

Although they are reluctant to admit it, authorities are concerned about the rainy season, which is just around the corner.

The land on which the tents are erected is porous, and flooding is not likely in normal rains. But the refugees will either get soaking wet in the food lines or simply go without eating. The long walk to the privy will be even less attractive.

Infections To Rise

The wet season usually also brings an upsurge of virus infections on Guam, with or without an additional refugee population. This is what most bothers Bordallo.

Bordallo said the longer refugees are forced to live in such crowded, uncomfortable conditions with minimal sanitation, the greater the chances of disease.

If a communicable disease starts, it will be difficult to control under the present conditions, Bordallo said.

This possibility could present a real danger to the 110,000 residents of the American island. There are now six cases of malaria under treatment as well as one confirmed and two probable cases of dengue fever.

Although the tent city was never intended to handle such a large number of refugees, Morrison said the $12 million allotted him has been sufficient so far.

"I haven't spent anywhere near that yet," he said.

Authorities said some of the money may have to be used to build more permanent refugee facilities.

New Miss U.S.A. Not Liberationist

The new Miss U.S.A., seated, is showered with congratulations after she was crowned in the annual beauty pageant in Niagara Falls, N.Y. The lucky girl, 5-foot-8, 125-pound Summer

Bartholomew of Merced, Calif., began her reign Sunday and said that although she believes in equal rights for women, she is not a women's liberation advocate. Those who criticize beauty pageants

"don't know what it really means to a woman," she said. She will represent the United States in the Miss Universe pageant in July in El Salvador.

Land Use Proposals Defended

Washington (UPI) — Rep. James A. Haley, an avowed conservative, said Sunday that other conservatives who attack pending land use legislation as "socialistic" are either "sadly misinformed" or "intentionally misleading."

"As a dedicated conservative all of my life, including over a quarter-century in public office, I believe I can spot a socialist or Communist conspiracy years before it bears fruit," the Florida Democrat said in a statement.

"I spot no such conspiracy in either of the land use bills."

The Senate version of the legislation was attacked recently by a Liberty Lobby spokesman as "socialism, pure and simple."

Haley said both the Senate bill and a version developed by his House committee were being attacked by "either ill-informed or intentionally misleading opponents."

Noting charges that the legislation had been "carefully worked out by socialist scholars," Haley declared: "I can, and do certify that it was worked out by members of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, of which I have been a member almost 23 years and chairman for going on three, and the committee's professional staff — and that neither the committee nor the staff includes a single 'socialist scholar.'"

Haley said the bill was designed to encourage the states, through federal land use planning grants, to take the initiative in working at the grassroots level to promote the concept of mutual stewardship of the land as a responsibility of all segments of society, including business, industry and the individual citizen," Haley said.

"The House bill is designed to encourage the states, through federal land use planning grants, to take the initiative in working at the grassroots level to promote the concept of mutual stewardship of the land as a responsibility of all segments of society, including business, industry and the individual citizen," Haley said.

Sex Statutes At Issue In 34 States

By The Associated Press

State laws restricting adult sexual behavior are falling by the wayside this year in campaigns to modernize long-outdated statutes that were rarely enforced, an Associated Press survey shows.

The AP survey of the 50 states showed that measures dealing with sex, including proposals on homosexuality, obscenity, massage parlors and rape, were an issue in 34 states this year.

Two states, California and New Mexico, approved major overhauls of laws pertaining to sexual behavior; similar widespread updates are pending in eight states; and Indiana defeated a proposal for change.

Nine states updated sex laws between 1970 and 1974 when they revised their criminal codes.

Not all of the measures under consideration this year involved liberalization of existing laws. Some called for stricter regulation of massage parlors; others extended the protection of rape laws to men as well as women.

Most of the more general measures were aimed at ending government regulation of sexual behavior between consenting adults in the privacy of their homes without removing the protection given to minors, rape victims and other unwilling sexual partners.

Other, more limited, proposals were designed to end discrimination against homosexuals, legalize prostitution and ease obscenity laws.

One of the most sweeping changes occurred in California where the legislature enacted a sexual "bill of rights" for adults.

The measure, signed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., repealed the state's 100-year-old sex laws and legalized all heterosexual and homosexual acts in private between consenting adults. It let stand laws against public solicitation for sex acts and measures against sex acts involving minors.

Assemblyman John Miller, a Democrat from Oakland, Calif., said the bill simply "says adults in private should not have to worry about the law."

The New Mexico legislature also decriminalized all sexual activity between consenting adults. The bill, which takes effect in June, was passed with only one dissenting vote and was supported by a variety of organizations, including women's rights groups, gay liberation activists and district attorneys.

Similar proposals are pending in New Jersey, Maine, Alabama, New York, Michigan, Alaska, Iowa and Missouri.

Many of the suggestions reflect changing social standards. In Missouri, for example, the present criminal code, enacted in 1835, says that living together in a "state of open and notorious adultery" is a misdemeanor. A proposed revision deletes this section of the code.

The state Senate has passed the revised code and sent it to the House where a similar measure is pending. The House version includes a provision that would decriminalize homosexuality by removing bans on oral or anal intercourse between consenting adults. The sponsor of the Senate bill has opposed this provision, although he supports proposals to allow oral or anal intercourse between husband and wife.

The Alaska legislature is considering repeal of laws against adultery and cohabitation. The laws were enacted in 1949 and officials say they can't enforce them any more. Under the existing statutes, "cohabitating in a state of adultery and fornication" is punishable by a $300 fine and up to three years in jail.

Laws involving obscenity, massage parlors, rape, homosexuality or other sexual behavior were introduced this year in 23 states in addition to the 11 where major overhauls were considered. The 23 are: Montana, Nebraska, Virginia, Ohio, Maryland, Arizona, Minnesota, Georgia, Colorado, Washington, Connecticut, Idaho, Oregon, Texas, Utah, Illinois, Vermont, New Hampshire, Tennessee, South Carolina, South Dakota, Massachusetts and Wisconsin.

Sinatra Compromises On Getaway

London (AP) — Frank Sinatra ran into trouble with authorities at Heathrow Airport on Sunday by demanding special customs clearance and a hush-hush departure.

Officials said Sinatra made the request twice and was turned down both times.

"Mr. Sinatra was informed on both occasions that if we allowed him to leave the country this way, we'd have to do the same for every other VIP passenger who wanted to avoid publicity," an airport spokesman said.

However, the two sides finally compromised.

Sinatra, accompanied by girlfriend Barbara Marx and bodyguard Billy Russo, boarded a private jet at a quiet sector of the airport and it tamed them across to the main terminal

Customs men boarded the plane there and later allowed it to take off for Geneva.

Sadat Has Mandate

Damascus, Syria — President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, completing a week's tour of four Arab countries in Damascus Sunday, said he had obtained a mandate to speak for the Arab world, not only Egypt, when he meets with President Ford in Salzburg June 1. At a news conference with Yassir Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, sitting next to him, Sadat made it clear that he believes his trip strengthened the Arab negotiating position.

B52s Considered

Vienna — The United States was considering using B52 bombers against the Cambodian mainland after the seizure of the freighter Mayaguez last week if the carrier Coral Sea had not arrived in the area of the freighter by Wednesday, a top United States official said. Reporters aboard the plane that brought Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to Vienna for talks with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union were told that to wait longer would have brought a high risk of the Cambodian government making public ransom demands, thereby freezing its position in regard to the freighter.

Economic Plan OK'd

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia's Council of Ministers approved a five-year domestic economic plan of vast magnitude, requiring the investment of $140 billion and the assistance of a half million foreign technicians, managers, teachers and laborers who would be imported into the country.

The foreigners would increase the domestic labor force by 31% to 2.3 million from 1.6 million. Among the planned domestic programs are the construction of 8,500 miles of highways, the expansion of port facilities a 10-fold rise in cement production and an expansion of water supplies and irrigation systems.

Rule Changes Proposed

Washington — The administration will send to Congress this week the first of a series of three bills aimed at fundamentally changing the way the government regulates transportation. The first bill, administration officials said, will be submitted in the next day or two and will propose changes in the way the 88-year-old Interstate Commerce Commission regulates the railroads. Similar legislation for trucking is expected in the next two weeks and a proposal affecting the Civil Aeronautics Board and the airlines within the next month.

Law Too Complicated

Washington — One of the advisers who attended the first meeting of President Ford's informal campaign-planning committee recently made remarks that indicated that the federal election act of 1974, which changes the way campaigns for federal office are financed, was complicated beyond understanding. Not only is the law full of ambiguities and even contradictions, it is also under all-out legal challenge, and no one is sure whether it will survive long enough for the 1976 election.

Building Standards Said Too High In Poor Nations

Washington (UPI) — Governments in developing countries may be setting their sights too high, leading to wasteful building cycles, according to a World Bank study called "Housing."

The World Bank said its role in improving housing conditions in the underdeveloped world "can only be limited."

The bank suggested more attention should be paid to upgrading squatter and slum areas.

"In most countries, the adherence to unrealistically high standards for new housing construction and the refusal to accept existing low quality dwellings, even as an interim solution, are the principle obstacles to better housing.

"The result is a cycle of construction and demolition. The poor, unable to construct or purchase dwellings of acceptable standards, are pushed to ever more distant peripheries," the study said.

The study said that improving squatter housing, sites and services could be "the prime instruments for improving the housing conditions of the urban poor."

Catholic Youth Slain In Ulster

Belfast, Northern Ireland (AP) — The body of a 17-year-old Roman Catholic boy, shot through the chest and knees, was found Sunday sprawled beside a country road 35 miles south of Belfast, police said.

"It looks like he was either killed by sectarian assassins or on orders of a kangaroo court run by one of the terrorist groups," a police source said.

AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION MAINTENANCE

It is a recognized fact that in many instances, clutch failure in automatic transmission is due to products of fluid oxidation being deposited in the clutch plates causing slippage.

Chevrolet Motor Division Recommends that every 24,000 miles or 2 years' service, under normal conditions the Automatic transmission should have the following services:

- Remove, clean & replace automatic pan.
- Remove, clean & replace suction screen.
- Check vacuum modulator valve, replace if needed.
- Adjust low band, add new fluid as needed.

Every businessman likes to make a profit. He needs it to stay in business.

But not many can get as sweet a deal as Dan D. Grisham of St. Charles, Mo., president of the Executive Advertising Co.

Under the arrangement he's got going in Lincoln, local merchants can promote their businesses, people save money and the Bethany Lions Club raises funds, perhaps as much as $5,000 for worthy causes.

And Dan D. Grisham walks out of Lincoln with a profit of about $8,000 estimating his daily operating expenses during an eight-week campaign at $495 per day and based on the sale of 3,000 coupon books.

Second Look

A deal this good doesn't get by without people taking a second look. But the City Attorney's Office has pronounced everything above board after a police investigation which led a detective to conclude in his report that "somebody is making a heck of a lot of money on the situation."

Grisham had the same deal set up during 1974. He sold about 2,200 or 2,300 coupon books for the Bethany Lions. The club made $1 for each $14.95 coupon book sold.

This year he ran into a little trouble. The Lincoln Solicitation Committee refused to grant the necessary city permit for the fund-raising project, based on a new city ordinance which went into effect in January.

The ordinance states that in fund-raising projects for charitable purposes the cost of raising the money must not exceed 25% of the total raised.

The Bethany Lions Club

Golden Checks project, as the coupon sale was called last year, did not qualify under the ordinance since expenses were about 83% of the total raised.

Another Problem

The project also failed to meet with another provision of the ordinance stating that solicitors for charitable fund raising must be volunteers.

Under the Executive Advertising Co. program, two six-hour shifts of about eight to ten telephone operators, working for $2 per hour and bonuses, do the solicitation. They are overseen by two company supervisors.

Grisham solved those problems by changing the name of the project to the Lincoln Merchants Golden Checks. He has no agreement to raise funds for the Bethany Lions.

Nonetheless, Grisham is giving the club $1 from the sale of every coupon book. The club is accepting the money.

Bethany Lions Club president

Lawrence Hilty freely talked about the situation. Hilty said he believes the city ordinance is too strict.

'Checked Out Thoroughly'

"We checked this company out very thoroughly. They operate all over the Midwest," Hilty said.

He said he believes he got a bad deal when the Solicitation Committee, a five-member body appointed by the mayor, rejected the application for the fund-raising project.

Hilty also pleaded against bad publicity. The money raised under the project, he said, will be used for things like sponsoring a youth at Boys or Girls State.

The Lions Club has heartily supported efforts to curb blindness and help those who are blind. Hilty noted that the Lincoln club recently sent a woman to Rochester, Minn., for training to use a leader dog.

Hilty noted that the local club has contributed to the Lion's Eye Institute in the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Straight From Heart

"I'm talking straight from the heart. We can't afford any bad publicity," he said.

The coupon book definitely enables the buyer to save money. Merely by using coupons for a free front wheel alignment and a free pizza the buyer can recoup the purchase price.

This leaves the remainder of the coupons entirely free of charge. A person can get a free box of chicken, a free game of bowling, a free shampoo, set and manicure, money off his dry cleaning bill, and other benefits.

So the coupon buyer saves money, the Lions Club makes money, and the merchants, presumably, drum up business by drawing people into their establishments, as well as helping a charity.

It's just a real good deal all around.

Spring Art Festival Draws Easels Abloom

The Haymarket Art Gallery's Spring Art Festival toasted the arrival of spring Sunday afternoon with an assortment of art works that had the parking lot display area looking like the best of art galleries.

A 500 hot dog crowd, estimated at several thousand people, strolled through a forest of easels abloom with the colors of spring and an occasional winter scene that looked real enough to melt in the 86-degree heat.

There was a near-carnival mood as the stop-look-and-walk crowd feasted its eyes on an artistic menu including painting, pottery, macramé, mosaics, collages, sculpture and jewelry.

And there to watch the watchers were 96 artists, who spent the day looking at other displays explaining their own work making an occasional sale and hearing the inevitable criticisms.

What have you got against green? asked a lady standing in front of a luscious green landscape dominated by even greener trees.

I just don't like green," her companion said. "Pinks and purples, yes. But I hate green."

Others were fascinated by a pair of bronze water fountains, complete with water-catching funnels and spinning pinwheels.

I don't care how it looks. I just think it would be fun to build one," a man said.

A Nebraska Wesleyan University professor, Jim Engeseth of 2221 N. 53rd, won the Best of Show award for his oil painting, "Pelouse." With the award came $50 donated by First National Bank of Lincoln.

The majority of the artists were from Lincoln and Omaha, but 28 came from elsewhere in Nebraska: four from Iowa and three from Kansas: Santa Fe, N.M.; Kansas City, Mo.; Canton, S.C. and Milwaukee, Wis. Each had one representative.

262,000 In Aid Committed In Omaha

Omaha (AP)—The American Red Cross has spent or committed $262,286.63 in tornado relief in Omaha, a spokesman said. The number of families served was 836.

He said a fund drive for aid of the victims stood at $229,514.

Sargent May Run

Boston (UPI)—Ex Gov Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts said he may run for Edward M. Kennedy's Senate seat in 1976 but not if he has to challenge Kennedy.

A pretrial brief accuses Rhodes, at the time of the shootings a lame-duck governor running for the Senate, of sending the guard to the campus to portray himself as a law-and-order candidate who was "tough on campus radicals."

The brief claimed the guard was used four to seven times more often to enforce civil law in Ohio than in other states during the 30 months before the shootings.

The brief also contends that Rhodes knew or should have known that guard units were inappropriately trained or ill-equipped.

Also it asserts that Rhodes ordered a special state grand jury proceeding to forestall an independent Portage County grand jury proceeding, which might have uncovered the defendants' alleged wrongdoing. It also claims the action was designed to attract public attention and censure toward students radicals and university people and away from Rhodes and the National Guard.

Clark and the other lawyers for the plaintiffs must prove this to the jury in order to establish liability. Liability must be established before damages can be considered.

A key legal point is the doctrine of sovereign immunity whether state officials can be immune from prosecution and damages in civil and criminal cases proceedings.

On April 17, 1974, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the state's doctrine of sovereign immunity was not absolute in the Kent State case.

Soon after the shootings a county grand jury cleared the Guardsmen and indicted 25 faculty members and students in connection with the four days of disorders capped by the May 4 shootings. The students began their demonstrations after an announcement that U.S. troops had been sent to Cambodia.

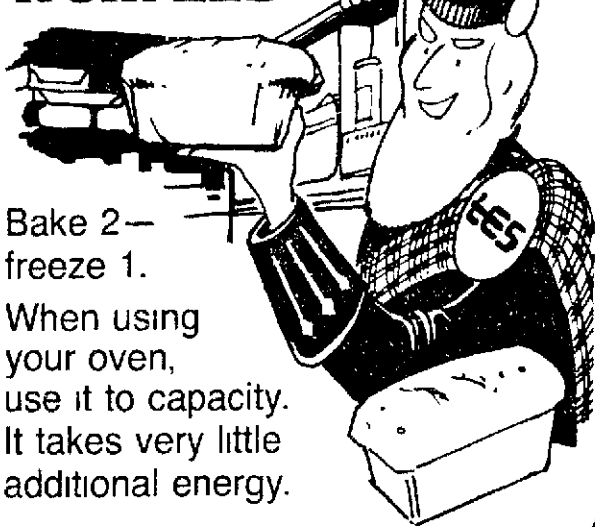

After five fruitless trials, the prosecution dropped the charges.

Nearly three years later a federal grand jury indicted eight former Guardsmen accused of firing into the crowd of student demonstrators.

Last year U.S. District Court Judge Frank Battisti of Cleveland dismissed the cases ruling the government failed to show that the Guardsmen intended maliciously to deprive victims of their civil rights.

Battisti said that "use of force against unarmed demonstrators was deplorable and suggested that a different verdict might be obtained in civil action."

So Soon We Forget

Columnist James Reston wrote a piece carried in The Star last week which we believe was sorely overdue; a needed reminder that this nation is not the shirker that many of its own citizens and much of the world say it is.

Reston recounted the American record since the end of World War II (not strange he should mention the big war; our response to that threat was not exactly lily-livered) in responding to communist threats, in coming to the aid of allies, in nipping outbreaks of hostility in the bud, in responding to challenges to American technological and scientific leadership and in helping to rebuild nations wrecked by war. His list included the Marshall Plan, the Berlin airlift, the Cuban missile blockade, the Truman doctrine, the race to the moon won by the U.S. and so on. It is an admirable record.

And it should be remembered in these harrowing days following the communist-nationalist-insurgent triumphs in Vietnam, Cambodia and now with Laos ready to go and Thailand threatened. It is not the directionless wandering of a senile mind which would take us all back to America's triumphs in this past quarter century. It is healthy to look at them and to realize again what we are capable of.

Reston's main point, worth repeating, is that "if there is a danger in the present mood of disappointment and failure in Southeast Asia, it is not that the United States will fail to react in the future, but that, if pushed, it will over-react, as President Kennedy did in Vietnam after his humiliating blunders at the Bay of Pigs. The truth is that a united America, out of Southeast Asia, is stronger and more reliable than a divided America fighting for dubious goals around Saigon, and if allies don't see that after the record of the last 30 years, no amount of rhetoric is likely to convince them."

There was a danger last week that this nation could have over-reacted to the Cambodian capture of the merchant ship Mayaguez. The flashpoint passed without the U.S. indiscriminately bombing the Cambodians back to the stone age. We tried diplomacy; it apparently didn't work. Then we tried a neat, surgical military thrust which did work with a minimum of lives lost. It was regrettable but it could have been worse.

It should assure those who are tempted to pick away at the United States that this nation is in no mood for cheap shots.

Perhaps that incident was not enough to reassure our allies that we will come through in the crunch, but it should help. And during this period of testing American resolve, it will help ourselves, our allies and those who might oppose us to look back at the record which Reston was so helpful in pointing out.

Looking For A New Name

That poll not so long ago which showed neither the Democrats' nor the Republicans' possibly-strongest ticket winning in 1976 by a large enough margin to keep the presidential election out of the House of Representatives is food for thought. It shows the potential for troublemaking of a third party movement, a potential which has duly worried major party organization people but which has gone largely unperceived by the grass roots; perhaps because so many of the roots are part of the problem.

Briefly, the poll showed that a Reagan-Wallace ticket would siphon so many votes away from Ford-Rockefeller and Kennedy-Glenn (the winners) that the election would be taken to the House.

Now that is supposing there would be a strong third party ticket with conservative appeal. And if Eugene McCarthy remains true to his word, there could be a fourth party movement with liberal appeal.

That is quite an assumption but it is possible and that is why, of course, both major parties (the GOP especially) are busily wooing the fringes of their party — trying to keep the flocks together. Ford is trying to placate the Reagan conservatives while all of the Democrats are worried about Wallace but no one seems to know what to do about him.

Still the Democratic candidates stream out, announcing or hinting at announcing one after another, all trying to stake a claim on a majority of the diverse elements of their party.

Birch Bayh of Indiana will announce shortly, it is rumored, and so will Terry Sanford, the former governor of North Carolina. They will join Jackson, Wallace, Udall, Bentsen, Carter and so on.

The primary states will be flooded with candidates between now and the 1976 conventions. In early June, Nebraska will see three Democratic hopefuls — Jimmy Carter, Morris Udall and Terry Sanford. There'll be a dizzying rush of them in the months to come.

Ali of them hoping to forge an LBJ-style consensus.

We're looking for a new political Messiah.

By DON WALTON

It's dangerous to look a year and a half ahead.

But, why not?

The voluntary departure of Roman Hruska from Nebraska's political scene, effective with the 1976 general election and the conclusion of his term two months later, has triggered all the forces of political machination.

Some men have waited 20 years for a Senate opening, their eyes fastened on a lifelong dream.

For some, time has passed them by. They are now 20 years older than they were the last time a Senate race in Nebraska was not dominated by an incumbent.

For others, the opening may be too early. They're not quite ready, not quite well known enough. But if they don't do it now, when will the opportunity come again? Will it be another 20-year wait for the traditional Omaha seat?

Only two men are groomed and ready. One, John McCollister, is going. The other, Jim Exon, is not so sure.

The speculation at the Statehouse has switched from a predominant view that the governor will not enter the Senate race to a growing suspicion that he will. At least, that's the view of senators who have particularly sensitive political antennae.

Without any special inside knowledge at all, I still don't think Exon is going to make the run next year. But we'll all find out the real answer soon enough.

Anyway, McCollister is a strong favorite to win the Republican nomination, and Exon can have the Democratic nod by filing as a candidate.

Neither can have it unchallenged. Nor should they. A Senate seat, with its six-year term and instant national recognition, is too rich a prize to go for the asking.

But McCollister is the choice of the traditional Republican power structure — just as Charley Thone probably will be if Carl Curtis also steps aside in 1978.

Only rarely can a Republican office-seeker buck the chosen line of succession.

McCollister has a strong base on which to build. In his home congressional district, the vote-rich precincts of Omaha form a solid foundation.

In a statewide race, his smooth use of television would be invaluable.

A stranger outside his district, McCollister will have a year and a half to travel the state and build statewide recognition and support.

As for Jim Exon, he already has a statewide constituency. And, importantly, in this case, he has strong support in Omaha.

The tradition of one Omaha seat in the Senate is overstated. It is ripe to be busted by a popular candidate with a statewide base, anchored to strong acceptance in Omaha. Exon has all of that.

Now, here comes some pure speculation, easily challenged and wide open to argument.

It's my guess that Exon is the only Democrat who could win that Senate seat — unless the political picture in Nebraska has changed so much next year that it is virtually unrecognizable.

It will, of course, be a presidential election year. So national (and international) developments could make a difference.

But a year and half before the fact, it's my guess that Exon is the only Democrat who could win it.

And yet (another guess), McCollister will be harder to beat than Hruska.

Nonsense, some people reply. Hruska is an incumbent. Look at his unbeaten string of election victories. Sure, you hear some criticism now. But that's always been the case. When it really counts, however, they vote for him. Always have.

Nevertheless, the guess here is that Exon would have unseated the senator if both had chosen to run.

Today, Exon would defeat McCollister. In November of 1976, after McCollister is as well known around the state as the governor, it would be an even battle — with traditional Republican voting habits in Senate contests on the line against an obviously popular Democratic governor.

Democrats haven't won a Senate race in this state since 1934. And an incumbent governor has never won direct election to the Senate in the history of the state.

We'll know better later, but right now I'd say John McCollister will be the next senator from Nebraska if Jim Exon doesn't challenge him.

And maybe even if he does. What do you think?

PHYLLIS BATTELLE

'I Don't Want To Go To College'

New York — A friend of mine has what she considers a devastating problem. Her 17-year-old son — handsome, an average student, top high school athlete — refuses to go to college.

"I tell him everybody who wants a decent future has got to go to college," she says, "but he just says, 'Maybe so, Mom, but I don't.' He says he's had enough education and wants to get a job. I can't figure out what he's rebelling against..."

Maybe he's rebelling against educational conformity, or parental status seeking, or financial dependency, or just plain school — which he has found dull. Whatever the reasoning, his parents think he is not only wrong, but insensitive; if they are willing to spend the money (close to $25,000) to send him to a "good school" which promises him a great future return for this money, he is being — in their view — ungrateful.

We live in a society that is more and more intellect-conscious, recognizing that not every boy or girl is suited for university disciplines, and that skilled labor is as vital as academia to keep the country moving — but we want the drones to be other people's sons and daughters, not ours.

According to "The Case Against College," a dismaying new book by Caroline Bird, this pushing and shoving of youngsters to "get an education" has resulted in college campuses where no more than 25% of the students are "turned on" by the classwork. For the rest, "college is at best a social center or aging vat — and, at worst, a young folks' home or even a prison that keeps them out of the mainstream of economic life for a few more years."

Ms. Bird traveled to hundreds of campuses, talking with thousands of students and professors, and found "a prevailing sadness" in colleges. "My unnerving conclusion is that students are sad because they are not needed. We already have too many people in the world of the 1970s, and there is no room for so many newly minted 18-year-olds. So we temporarily get them out of the way by sending them to college where, in fact, only a few belong."

With universities now often using hard-sell Madison Avenue techniques to attract students, U.S. parents have been convinced that young people will benefit financially from those four years. "But if money is the only goal," she writes, "college is the dumbest investment you can make."

The author worked with a young banker, and they used a computer to compare college as an investment with other investments available:

A Census Bureau study in 1972 states that a man who completed four years of college could expect to earn $199,000 more between the ages of 22 and 64 than a man who had only a high school diploma. But author Bird and the banker computed that if a 1972 Princeton-bound high school graduate had put the $34,181 that his four years of college would have cost him into a savings bank at 7.5% interest compounded daily, he would have at age 64 a $1,129,200... or $528,200 more than the earnings of a male college graduate, and more than five times as much as the $199,000 extra the more educated man could expect to earn between 22 and 64!

Furthermore, she points out, there are other investments that offer far more fascinating and challenging returns than the college diploma. Example: "A Princeton-bound high school graduate of 1972 who liked fooling around with cars could have banked his $34,181 and gone to work at the local garage at close to $1,000 more per year than the average high school graduate earns.

"Meanwhile, as he was learning to be an expert auto mechanic, his money would be ticking away in the bank. When he turned 28, he would have earned $7,199 less on his job from age 22 to 28 than his college-educated friends — but he would have had $73,113 in his passbook — enough to buy out his boss and go into business."

Alas, of course, few high school graduates get the opportunity to bank such large sums of money because few parents "are sophisticated enough to understand that in financial returns alone, their children would be better off with the money than with the education."

And this brings us to the heart of the economic-impact-of-higher-education enigma. "In fact," states Ms. Bird, "there is no real evidence that the higher income of college grads is due to college. College may simply attract people who are slated to earn money anyway; those with higher IQs, family backgrounds, more enterprising temperaments." Thus, those who go to college without those prerequisites — or with little interest in the intellectual life — may not necessarily earn much higher incomes than they would have had they stopped at high school. In "Inequality" by Christopher Jencks, a book assessing the effects of U.S. schooling, the author says, "The biggest single source of income differences seems to be the fact that men from high-status families have higher incomes than men from low-status families even when they enter the same occupations, have the same amount of education, and have the same test scores."

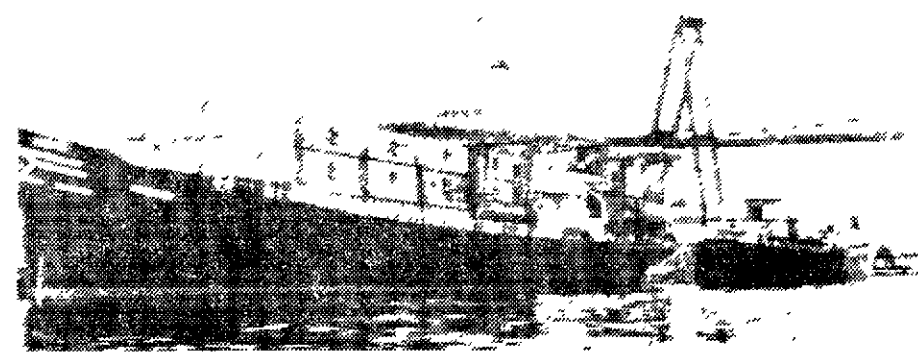

It's something to think about. And "The Case Against College" is some book to read if you have a youngster who either wants to go to college for the wrong reasons — or wants to stay away from college for the right reasons.

Questions On The Mayaguez

The U. S. merchant ship Mayaguez, seized in the Gulf of Thailand by a Cambodian warship 60 miles off the coast of Cambodia...

NEW YORK — It is too early to reach final judgments about President Ford's use of military force in quickly recovering the Mayaguez and her crew from their Cambodian captors. On the evidence of what is so far known, however, the following may be reasonably or tentatively suggested:

— Whatever other imperatives may have been working upon Ford, Secretaries Kissinger and Schlesinger and their associates, one surely was a desire to use the Mayaguez incident to demonstrate to new and old Asian governments that the United States still had the power and the will to protect what it regards as its interests in the Pacific and elsewhere.

— The operation raises anew some of serious questions about the efficacy of the War Powers Act.

— Despite doubts being expressed about the need for the quick use of military force, Secretary Schlesinger was no doubt right in remarking rather smugly: "I do not believe there will be many inclined to persistently argue with what has been a laudable and successful operation." The reaction of Congress tends already to support that observation.

— Surely there will be a few, however, to "persistently argue" the numerous doubts and ambiguities about a course of action, however successful, that may not have been necessary. For example:

It seems reasonable that the Ford administration would want to avoid a long period of haggling — particularly with a government that it does not recognize and regards as hostile — over the details of where and when and how the Mayaguez crewmen would be returned to American custody. But since the Cambodian announcement — generalized as it was — of willingness to free the crewmen appears to have been made well before the Marines were sent in, would it not have been more judicious to have explored for some hours or even a day just what the Cambodians intended?

As in every case when hostages are being held, it had to be weighed whether an effort to recapture them would not, in fact, endanger their lives more than captivity itself. In the Mayaguez matter, as Schlesinger observed, the men were recaptured safely. But after the battle began, they might as easily have been killed, deliberately by their captors, accidentally in the exchange of firing, or in the sinking of three Cambodian patrol boats (it could not be known for sure that none of the Americans were aboard).

Some of the attacking Marines were killed and others were wounded. This sad fact, plus the undeniable risks taken with the lives of the captured crewmen, demands inquiry into the real necessity for using the Marines so quickly.

Virtually every president has felt the necessity to show himself willing to use force if necessary. In the wake of the collapse of South Vietnam and the fall of the Lon Nol regime in Cambodia, with the United States unable to prevent either development, it is clear that Ford felt himself under unusual pressures of this kind — not least because of concerns repeatedly expressed by Kissinger and Schlesinger. Nor can their views be dismissed out of hand; obviously they did have to weigh whether their response would invite other more dangerous challenges than that presented in the Mayaguez incident.

If inquiry discloses, nevertheless, that firm diplomatic representations might quickly have recovered both crew and ship without armed confrontation or loss of life, the burden will be heavily on the administration to justify making a show of force merely for the sake of that show. A show of restraint, it might well be argued, would have demonstrated more true strength than a panicky resort to the Marines.

As for the War Powers Act, the incident shows how little use is its command that the President consult with Congress "in every possible instance" before using force. The problem lies in defining "consultations;" obviously, Ford — reserving as much latitude to himself as possible — informed Congress only of what he had already decided to do. That is likely to be the course any president follows in similar situations.

The Mayaguez incident, in its very ambiguity, also suggests a central difficulty with the War Powers Act, or any such legislation. A president must be left some room to decide and act since congressional debate can hardly handle Mayaguez incidents, but if a president has such discretion, it may be abused either deliberately or through mistaken judgment on his part.

Besides, as Schlesinger's comment predicts and as congressional reaction shows, it's always going to be hard to rebuke a president who puts on his commander-in-chief's hat, pulls off a "successful" military operation, and claims to have upheld the American flag against foreign devils.

JACK ANDERSON Navy Has Number High In Alcoholism

WASHINGTON — The image of the drunken, brawling sailor apparently is founded in fact.

According to an official study, a startling 38% of the Navy's enlisted men confess they are boozers, with a drinking problem which they describe as "critical," "very serious" or at least "serious."

What's more, 25% of the sailors told the researchers that their excessive drinking had often made them "belligerent." Half this number, 12%, acknowledged tangling with the law during their alcoholic binges.

The study, stiffly titled "Attitudes and Behavior of Naval Personnel Concerning Alcohol and Problem Drinking," was conducted for the Navy by the Bureau of Social Science Research, a Washington-based research firm. We have obtained a copy.

The report is a shocking indictment of the Navy's inability to cope with its alcoholics, who number in the tens of thousands. One of the most alarming disclosures in the report was that 44% of the enlisted men had been "high," or drunk, at least six times at their present duty station.

One out of four confessed that alcohol had actually affected the performance of their duties at some time during the past six months. Somewhat fewer officers, 17%, admitted similar alcohol-related difficulties.

The number of chronic alcoholics in the Navy is conservatively estimated at 30,000 and their alcoholism costs the taxpayers at least $45 million a year.

Navy spokesmen, in response to our inquiries, agreed that alcoholism is a serious problem for the Navy. They insisted, however, that Navy alcohol recovery programs are treating 4,000 alcoholic servicemen a year and are successfully returning 70% to active duty.

Meanwhile, many sailors, having been promised absolute anonymity, declared candidly that the Navy itself was one of the main causes of their excessive drinking.

KEVIN P. PHILLIPS Reagan's Rubicon

WASHINGTON — Is Ronald Reagan ready to cross the Presidential Rubicon? Despite the Californian's rising poll strength, some of his supporters continue to nurture private qualms.

"Crossing the Rubicon," a phrase which implies irrevocable personal commitment, comes from Julius Caesar's march on Rome. When Caesar was governor of Gaul, the Rubicon (probably the present-day Fiumicino River) was the boundary between Gaul and Roman Italy. Provincial governors were forbidden to cross that boundary with troops, but in January of the year 49 B.C., Caesar crossed the Rubicon in a symbolic act which marked the beginning of his successful drive for the leadership of Rome.

The first decision Reagan must make — whether or not to oppose Gerald Ford in the 1976 Republican presidential primaries — is hardly Rubicon-like. After all, Mr. Ford is a relatively weak president, without the imprimatur and strength of an elected chief executive. To oppose him in the primaries is no life or death challenge. Tennessee Senator Howard Baker has dropped hints that he, too, may take on the President. As for Reagan, my information is that he will begin organizational preparation this summer, and probably announce his candidacy very late in 1975.

The White House is already moving to conciliate rather than fight. Spokesmen and sympathetic journalists are already putting out the word that if Reagan will relent, President Ford will allow an open, free-for-all vice-presidential contest — conservatives can have a shot at taking the nomination away from Nelson Rockefeller.

But there are three good reasons why nobody should take this scenario seriously. First, Reagan doesn't want to be vice president (politicians covet that job only as a steppingstone to the presidency itself, and by 1980, the former California governor would be too old). Secondly, a real vice-presidential contest seems unlikely when the new Ford campaign committee is half a Rockefeller committee (including men like Melvin Laird, who pushed Rockefeller's original selection as V.P., plus longtime Rockefeller aide Robert Douglas). Lastly, even if Reagan could wrest away the vice-presidential nomination, could a Ford-Reagan ticket possibly win given the anger of spurned Rockefeller Republicans and the probability of a third-party race by George Wallace (with whom Reagan, as mere vice-presidential nominee, couldn't cut a deal)?

Thus, unless Reagan has lost his marbles, we can eliminate the vice-presidential bumpoff. Presumably the ex-governor will run in the presidential primaries. But in itself, that's still not crossing the Rubicon of the political year 1976.

My feeling is that the Californian will begin to glimpse the river of no return during March and April primary ventures into states like New Hampshire, Florida and Wisconsin.

Any Recession's Just A Bunch Of Statistics

NEW YORK (AP) — Predictions by economists that an economic recovery is coming later this year might mean something different from what the public regards as a recovery from the recession.

When an economist talks of recovery, "it means the downturn is over, but that doesn't mean the end of bad times," says Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul Samuelson. "All a recovery means is that the slide is ended."

"The recovery is a statistical phenomena. It doesn't mean that industry is going to pick up sharply and that unemployment will improve dramatically," says First National City Bank economist Leif Olsen.

The general public probably regards an economic recovery as meaning fewer jobless and more buying power, but most economists, liberal or conservative, seem to be talking a different language.

Samuelson says he'll be looking for an increase in the Federal Reserve's industrial production index, followed by a quarterly increase in the Gross National Product.

"I would then make a provisional judgement that the economy is recovering," he says.

Olsen says he is watching for an increase in the growth rate in the nation's money supply, a quarterly GNP increase, and a cooling of the inflation rate.

Proposal Studied To End Double Dividend Taxation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious concern over whether U.S. industry will have the money it needs for future investment may prompt the Ford administration to ask Congress to remove what it feels is a double taxation of corporate dividends.

The proposal has been under study for several months, sources say.

The change would result in one of two things: elimination of taxes on dividends received by taxpayers, or permission for corporations to deduct part or all of their dividends payments before computing the taxes they owe the government.

The nation's tax laws currently work in such a way that a corporation pays taxes on the same income from which it pays dividends, while the shareholder also has to pay taxes on the dividends he or she receives.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon says this results in a "two tier system of corporate taxation in which income is taxed once at the corporate level and again at the shareholder level."

Both stockholders and corporations would benefit from the change. But the main object would be to make a corporation's stock more attractive to investors, thus making it easier for corporations to raise investment capital by issuing stock.

Sources say there is considerable support for the change within the administration.

"The notion has a good deal of support across the spectrum among economists and tax professionals," said Marvin Kosters of the American Enterprise Institute, who until recently was a White House economist. But Kosters said he was uncertain over its political acceptability to the Congress.

He said he had no strong preference whether the change is made at the taxpayer or corporation level but said he personally believes it would be better to have corporations pay taxes after dividends have been deducted.

Other measures to help corporations have been considered too, such as a possible lowering of the corporate income tax rate, now 48% of income, but there are doubts whether Congress would approve.

President Ford asked in his State of the Union address in January that the corporate tax rate be lowered to 42% this year to give a tax stimulus to business, but Congress did not go along with it.

Changes in corporation taxes would be considered as part of a general tax reform package that the administration will present to Congress later this year.

Simon has said that without some additional encouragement for savings and investment, the nation will be hard-pressed to meet its investment needs for the next 10 years, estimated by the Commerce Department at $3.4 trillion, three times the investment outlays of the past 10 years.

Gering Fire Dept. Gets Top Award

Grand Island (AP) — The Gering Fire Department received the top award in the fire prevention division at the annual Nebraska State Fire School Sunday afternoon.

The department received a plaque from Ak-Sar-Ben, the Omaha civic organization which has sponsored the awards for 16 years, and a check for $200 to purchase equipment.

Secondary awards of a plaque and $100 will go to the Dakota City Volunteer Fire Department, the Schuyler Volunteer Fire Department and the Blair Volunteer Fire Department.

Ak-Sar-Ben's "Heroism Award" went to Howard J. Taylor Jr. of Alliance, Robin

Phillips and Terry Kamprath, both of Seward; Leo Hesper of Schuyler and William Larson of Ralston.

Each will receive a plaque and check for $100.

Taylor was cited for responding to an alarm and finding a baby had stopped breathing. By the time they reached the hospital the baby was breathing again because of Taylor's efforts.

Phillips and Kamprath were recognized for displaying quick action in applying pressure to stop the bleeding of an individual who had crashed through a glass door.

Hesper rescued an 11-year-old who had gotten hold of some hot wires with both hands and could not let go.

Last winter, Larson came upon an auto accident and administered the necessary first aid to an individual who sustained a serious injury, perhaps saving his life.

Ten firemen received an Ak-Sar-Ben plaque and $50 each to help pay their expenses at the fire school.

They were Harry Vankirk of Alliance, Eugene Peterson of Colon, Lennie Jones of Columbus, Robert Herring of Fremont, Herman Opfer of Hoskins, Jack Browning of Imperial, Dean N. Christoffersen of Norfolk, Verner Fischer of Wakefield, Paul Rogge of Wayne and Clifford Daberkow of West Point.

UP Will Buy New Machinery

Omaha (UPI) — The Union Pacific Railroad said Sunday it will spend more than $3.25 million in capital expenditures for new roadway maintenance machinery this year.

R. M. Brown, the railroad's chief engineer, said $2.9 million of the total will go for 277 pieces of new equipment to replace comparable worn out units and more than $400,000 will be spent in six additional units such as diesel powered track tramping machines and ballast regulator machines.

UP had previously announced it would spend $46.5 million for rail, ties, ballast and surface and lining work during the year.

Detente In Jeopardy

Washington (AP) — A bipartisan group of 36 congressmen have sent a letter to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin warning that continued Russian discrimination against Jews could hinder detente.

Spotlight on Agriculture

You can get into a peck of trouble by not reading the fine print on a contract when you buy a piece of machinery.

One Saunders County farmer showed me a contract he has for a new disc. He was aiming to save some money by assembling it himself.

What he actually got was a 12-foot piece out of the middle of an 18-foot disc. The mud scrapers came late so he lost six days in the field after turning the disc into a mechanical mudball when he tried to disc without the missing scrapers.

At last report he had the 12-foot center piece, the scrapers and a pair of rims, but was still missing the wings for each side and the axles for the wings.

On the back side of the contract is a lot of fine print that says that the dealer isn't at fault if the company can't get the parts or the wrong parts are sent.

I guess you better read both sides of the contract with great care when you buy anything. Signing on the front side makes you responsible for both sides.

Fine print always protects the seller and never is of much value to the buyer, so the buyer had better read and understand it thoroughly.

Cattle prices are getting better, but some farmers are still losing money on some animals. I talked to a farmer who paid $85 for a bucket calf that he recently sold for $67 after feeding it all winter.

A drive through the country north and west of Lincoln last week convinced me that there is a lot of overgrazed pasture and darn little hay around if it suddenly turns dry again.

This could force a lot of cattle onto the market in a hurry, ending the brief period farmers have had on the black side of the economic ledger in feeding cattle.

If you are a gal who is going to marry a farmer you might take a course in bookkeeping or if you already are married to a farmer you might consider taking on a bookkeeping course in night school.

I have talked with a number of farmers who maintain an office in their homes and hire a professional bookkeeper to come out one or two days a week and bring the books up to date.

Farming is big business these days with a very average kind of family farmer running up bills of more than $100,000 a year by just buying things like fuel, fertilizer, seed, parts and those other things we call agricultural inputs to produce a crop.

Add to that the task of keeping an inventory on a half million dollars worth of land and equipment and you see where some good business courses are a requirement for a farmer or his wife or his bookkeeper. Keeping a fistful of receipts in a cigar box doesn't make it.

The government is struggling with the definition of what a farm is.

Today a farm is a piece of land of 10 or more acres that produces $50 or more in produce. It can also count on less than 10 acres if it produced $250 or more in produce sales.

Only about 1% of the nation's food is produced on farms that produce less than $2,500 worth of produce for sale, so the government is considering a new definition of a farm.

Some think a cash sale of $2,500 should be the minimum, but as usual we will probably get some kind of compromise around $1,000, perhaps with some acreage figure.

Many large gardens can easily exceed the current minimum farm definition in terms of cash income if the produce is all sold.

Now that the farm bill has been eliminated as an aid to farmers you will see calls for a grain reserve again because farmers will be seeking a market for this year's crop.

They want to sell their crop to someone and view a grain reserve as a possible market for their product.

Others who oppose a grain reserve say that it will prove to be a drag on the market for future crops, resulting in lower prices for farmers in the long run.

I doubt that many farmers will be willing to sell wheat for the current loan rate, which is well below the cost of producing a bushel of wheat on most farms if all costs are counted.

The same is true for feed grains at present loan levels. I was quite surprised that the Ford Administration did not increase loan rates when the bill was vetoed.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Vernalization is a word that wheat farmers are learning or relearning this year. It means springlike. Unless winter wheat is vernalized it doesn't grow grain, just straw.

To be vernalized, winter wheat must spend about six weeks in the ground after it has sprouted at temperatures below 45 degrees. But in a greenhouse experiment it has been shown that successful vernalization can be achieved in as little as 3 weeks by lowering the temperature to 45 only at night.

Dr. John Schmidt, the well known wheat breeder at UNL, tells me that the wheat doesn't have to grow, just sprout, to be vernalized so it is possible that wheat that came up this spring after being in the ground all winter did vernalize.

The problem is that it may not have vernalized either. Your county agent can show you how to tell if you bring him in a few samples from your field.

Some eastern Nebraska wheat fields are in danger of heavy lodging due to unused fertilizer from last year's dryland corn or milo that didn't produce a crop.

We need some windy dry weather to aid the wheat in this end of the state and a lot of rain to help it in the western end of the state.

Corn and milo planting are getting off to a late start in much of the state, which can reduce yields.

As farmers put it, we are still a long way from having any of our crop in the storage bin and we can't be sure we have it until it is being combined. Even then you can still lose it.

State Kidnaping Law Said Unconstitutional

Nebraska's law against kidnaping should be ruled unconstitutional because it is vague and overbroad, according to an attorney for a Washington County man convicted under the statute.

A brief filed with the Nebraska Supreme Court on behalf of Billy Boyce contends the kidnaping statute violates the constitutions of Nebraska and the United States.

Boyce and Gary Lynn Saltzman were convicted under the statute in 1974 after they allegedly "relieved" a Blair policeman of his pistol and patrol car when the policeman could not tell them where the county attorney's home was located. They took the policeman, an Officer Schnur, out of town in the patrol car. They later released him and turned themselves in, the brief said.

The argument filed on behalf of Boyce says sections of the kidnap statute "do not precisely describe prohibited conduct, to not exclude liberal interpretation and to do not provide the constitutionally mandated security of the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the power of government."

The brief also argues that the district court should have granted Boyce's request for a special prosecutor. It contends the Washington County attorney was prejudiced, because Boyce and Saltzman allegedly kidnapped Schnur, in part, for the purpose of "compelling (him) to direct the defendant to the residence of the county attorney."

In addition, it argues that Boyce was not allowed a reasonable time to prepare for trial.

The district court sentenced Boyce to not less than five nor more than 15 years in the state prison.

Hastings College Given $450,000 Contribution

Hastings (UPI) — Hastings College announced Sunday a prominent Omaha couple has given at least $450,000 to its centennial fund-raising campaign for the construction of the long-planned addition to the college's science hall.

The centennial campaign for which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daughtery contributed the funds will officially begin Sept. 23 and have a $7 million goal.

Daughtery has been a member of the Hastings College Board of Trustees since 1969 and will head the campaign's special gifts committee.

College officials said the campaign will have as its goal the objective of bringing the school to an "outstanding position in all areas" by 1982 — the college's 100th anniversary.

Daughtery is president of Valmont Industries of Valley and chairman of the board of Con Agra of Omaha. He serves on the board of directors of the Omaha National Bank, Flavorland Industries and Great Plains Natural Gas.

Emergency Treatment Cost-Free

Omaha (UPI) — Omaha residents who were treated at Methodist Hospital's emergency room for injuries suffered in the May 6 tornadoes will not be charged by the hospital or physicians, the hospital said.

Forty six persons were treated, and letters have been sent informing them they will not be charged.

A hospital spokesman said emergency room outpatient charges totaled $1,218 following the storm.

In addition, patients who required tetanus shots May 6-12 were charged only for the drug, not the emergency room service, the spokesman said.

Accident Kills Filley Man, 43

Adams (UPI) — A 43-year-old Filley man was killed early Sunday when the pickup truck he was driving was struck by a freight train just west of the Adams corner on Neb. 41.

The State Patrol identified the victim as Arthur J. Dorn.

The patrol said the truck was eastbound when it collided with the train, which was traveling northwest.

Hay Makers Day Set For North Platte

North Platte — Equipment designed for making and handling hay will be featured at the second Hay Makers Day here Saturday, July 26. Dr. Jim Nichols, Extension range and forage specialist at the University of Nebraska North Platte Station, says manufacturers and retailers will be invited to display and field demonstrate their equipment used for haying. The event will start at 10:30 a.m. CDT at a meadow on the Rosedale Ranch located one-half mile north of the North Platte River on Highway 83 and 1.2 miles east.

Hereford Field Day Scheduled

Davey — Members of the Nebraska Junior Hereford Association have announced plans to stage their annual field day at Mill-Ray Herefords at Davey Saturday, June 14, starting at 8 a.m. The traditional horned Hereford breeding cattle judging contest will be held during the morning. Featured speaker at the afternoon program will be B. C. Snidow, assistant secretary of the American Hereford Association. A new Nebraska Hereford queen will be crowned during the day.

Gas Hearings Are Slated

Kansas City (AP) — Hearings are scheduled in Kansas City Tuesday on proposed regulations to prohibit some power plants from burning natural gas or fuel oil as primary sources of energy. James R. Newman, Federal Energy Administration director for Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, said the savings in the four states was more than half of the projected gas savings nationally — 160 billion feet. He said federal law allows the FEA to prohibit plants with a capability of burning coal from using oil or gas.

Mental Confinement Law May Face 3-Judge Ruling

Omaha (AP)—A request for a three-judge ruling has been filed in Federal District Court in an attempt to declare Nebraska's involuntary mental confinement law unconstitutional.

The suit was filed by Bruce Doremus, 29, of Lincoln against Dr. C. H. Farrell and other members of the Douglas County Board of Mental Health.

In the suit, Doremus claimed he was held from Nov. 7 to 15 in the Douglas County Hospital without a "due process hearing."

Besides asking for $50,000 in damages, Doremus seeks to have the board members restrained from using the involuntary confinement law in the future because he claims it violates the constitutional rights of those confined.

Doremus asked that the suit be considered a class action.

Equipment To Fight Soil Loss Improves

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of Monday morning articles dealing with erosion control.)

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Forty years of soil conservation work by the Soil Conservation Service has resulted in fantastic improvements in equipment used by farmers and contractors to reduce soil loss from wind and water.

Early in Nebraska's history farmers tried plowing furrows to hold back water so it would soak into the soil rather than run off of fields carrying along the top soil.

Today those early terraces constructed with real live horse power are giving way to huge, grass-packed parallel terraces constructed by scrapers pulled not by two horses but by two huge diesel engines.

"When I started 20 years ago we were pulling the old whirlwind terracers with a Ford tractor. Today we use a wide array of construction machinery on much larger structures," recalled Lee Jackson, an engineer with the SCS office in Lincoln.

Jackson cited a number of reasons for the changes in equipment and practices. "Farms are bigger. We used to use two-row equipment and farmers had more time so they didn't mind short rows, but with today's large 6- and 8-row equipment the short end rows are not acceptable to farmers," he said.

Jackson said that whenever possible he is trying to design land treatment systems for 12-row equipment. "Farm machinery is going in one direction, bigger. It has to be that way because of the high cost of labor today," he said.

One way to make large machinery and land-saving programs compatible is to make the terraces parallel to eliminate as many as possible of the short rows that were a feature of the early terraces built on the contour of the land.

"I think I say my first step back terraces in 1953. They were pretty new because they had no grass on the back slope yet. These were on flat land designed to hold water there for use by crops, rather than guide it into a waterway," he said.

What then was a revolutionary concept is becoming more common on Nebraska farms. "We are trying to get one set of these new style terraces in each of our districts, Norfolk, Lincoln, Grand Island, McCook, Broken Bow and Scottsbluff so we can get better cost of construction figures for farmers on these terraces," he said.

Jackson predicted that the costly terraces would become less expensive as the SCS and contractors gain experience in designing them and building them.

"We are going to computer designs, which will aid us in reducing the distance earth must be hauled, reducing cost. The computer can reduce the cost of design because it reduces the amount of manpower needed for design work," he said.

Contractors will be able to reduce the amount of time and fuel needed to construct the new terraces as they gain experience. "We are already seeing some drop in the bids for moving dirt this year," he said.

Some interesting new machines such as a laser guidance system for maintaining the grade of a terrace or tile line have been developed and more are exhibited at land contractor conventions each year.

Jackson said the average life of a terrace was about seven years, but he added that maintenance of terraces could add years to their soil holding ability. "I know of some that are over 35 years old and are still doing a good job because they are well maintained," he said.

The farmer's ability to manage his land treatment system is a factor in the design suggested by SCS engineers for a farm. "If he does a good job of maintaining ground cover we can make the terraces farther apart than for a farmer who doesn't do this. We try to tailor the system to the farmer's land, his machinery and his abilities as a land manager," Jackson said.

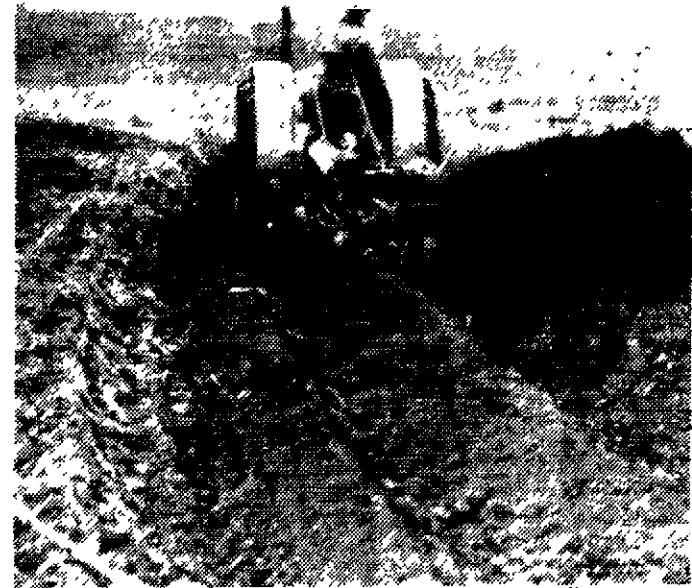

Jackson said SCS now develops a total plan for a farm rather than a piecemeal approach for specific practices wanted by a farmer. "We try to fit his practice into a total system of land treatment so it will all fit together even if he does only a part of it now," he explained.

Farmers' practices and new minimum tillage equipment have made land treatment to prevent soil losses more effective.

"The till planter has greatly reduced the soil losses and the fact that farmers are learning to cut down on trips over the field, leaving more residue on top, are making a big difference."

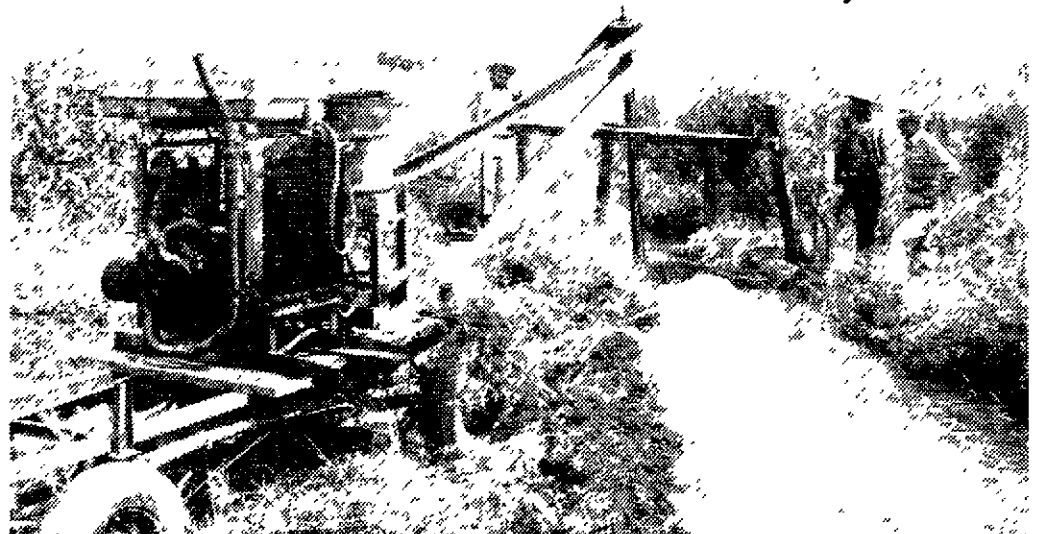

The lack of statistical evidence doesn't discourage Jackson from claiming a financial benefit from good conservation work. "I know that better varieties play a role as do fertilizers, but I feel certain that a part of the increased yields farmers have is due to better farming practices and good conservation work. You just can't produce a crop without topsoil. That is our job, keeping topsoil on the farm, out of streams and lakes," he said.

While It Lasts!

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Consumers shouldn't get "fired up" over labels on bolts of fabric indicating the fabric is "flammable."

That is the feeling of most managers of fabric shops and departments about the many "flammable" markings being placed on fabric bolts.

The action was prompted by federal legislation governing sleepwear for children and a recent lawsuit against J.C. Penney in connection with burns suffered by a 6-year-old child when her nightgown burst into flames.

The label warning the consumer that a fabric is "flammable" does not mean that the particular fabric is any different than it was nor that it has any more flammable content than it did last month or last year.

The label merely is a warning that that fabric should not be used for children's sleepwear and serves as a protection against liability for the manufacturer and/or retailer.

A new federal law requires that all children's sleepwear up through size 14 manufactured or imported after May 1 must be flame retardant and have a label that says so.

The requirement also applies to fabric intended for sleepwear.

Although very few fabrics are flame retardant, most managers of Lincoln fabrics shops indicate that those intended for children's sleepwear are flame retardant and are so labeled.

They also indicate that fabrics such as flannel which were sometimes used for sleepwear are marked "flammable" or "not suitable for children's sleepwear" if they have not been treated to make them flame-safe.

Steve Johnson, manager of Northwest Fabrics, said that although it is technically illegal under the federal regulations for individuals to sew nightwear for children out of anything other than flame-retardant fabrics, "we have no control over what they use it for after they purchase it."

He said he had just received a directive from his firm to label as "flammable" all fabrics which have not been treated for flame resistance.

Pointing to a news story which appeared recently in the Minneapolis Star, Johnson said the "flammable" labels are "for our own protection."

According to the story, the parents of 6-year-old Melanie Abel filed a $2.45 million civil action in the U.S. District Court in Minneapolis in which the Raymond Abels Jr. charge that the defendant, J. C. Penney Co., Inc., is responsible for the accident which resulted in second and third-degree burns to their daughter.

The suit alleges that Penney, which sold the material for the nightgown Melanie was wearing, was "negligent" and "liable" for selling the "highly flammable" fabric without any warning about its flammability.

"The material was not fit or safe for attire to wear by children, was not properly labeled, was misbranded and was dangerous," the suit states, according to the newspaper.

The suit alleges that the child was burned when the nightgown came into contact with a fire in a wastebasket at the family's lake home near Hibbing.

Johnson said the fabrics labeled "flammable" are no different than they always were, but when the label goes on them, consumers tend to think that there is something in the fabric content to make them more flammable than when there was no warning posted.

Clerks in children's departments in local stores said they had the same problem when they first received the flame-resistant sleepwear for children.

Fabric flammability requirements for children's sleepwear in sizes 0 to 6X were passed into federal regulation in 1972 and went into effect July 29, 1973.

At that time a standard for children's sleepwear sizes 7-14 also was proposed but was not passed until later and became effective May 1.

According to Jane Speece, Extension clothing specialist with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, even though the regulation went into effect May 1, stores may continue to sell the sleepwear or sleepwear fabric manufactured before that date.

Because of this, the label is of particular importance in helping consumers determine which sleepwear is flame resistant.

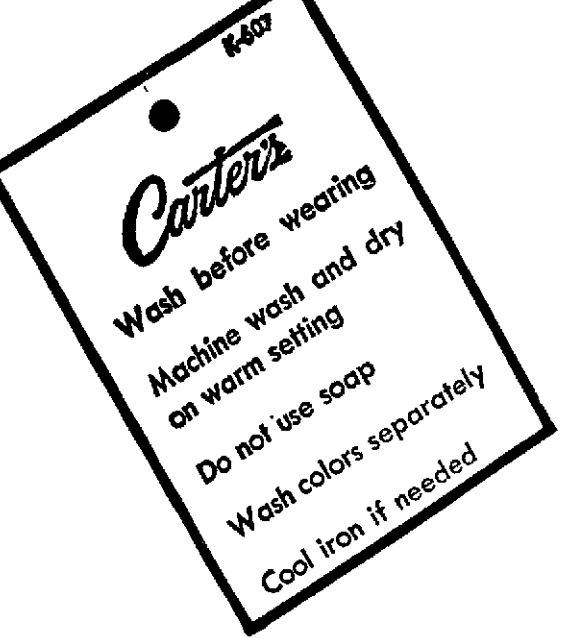

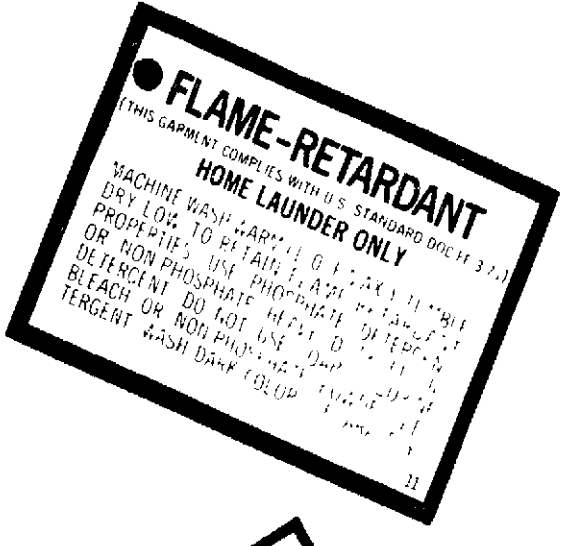

In addition to children's sleepwear, manufacturers are also starting to make other flame-safe fabrics, even though no other garments are covered yet under law, Mrs. Speece said.

Some flame resistant knits, jerseys and jean-type fabrics are available.

The ignition test used on the sleepwear samples requires that the manufacturers cut five specimens from each garment and test them for flammability on both the length and width.

The test requires the specimens to be exposed to a gas flame for three seconds. The fabrics are laundered and dried 50 times and exposed again to the flame test.

A simulated seam is sewn in what is found to be the most flammable direction and tested again. Any trim or decoration on the garment that is more than two inches long must also be tested.

Insure Children's Safety; Follow Laundering Rules

To insure the safety of your child, flame-retardant fabrics require special laundering procedures.

In order to maintain the flame retardant qualities of fabrics after several washings, special care and treatment must be taken, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Law provides that care labels must be attached to all flame retardant sleepwear that could be adversely affected by certain laundering agents and treatments.

A check with Lincoln stores revealed that the labels are attached to children's nightwear and at least one company issues an instruction brochure on the washing of its children's sleepwear.

However, the instructions may present problems for consumers. As a result of findings that phosphates may cause pollution of rivers and other waterways, some cities, counties and states have banned or limited the sale of phosphate detergents. Consumers in those areas must buy either low-phosphate or non-phosphate detergents.

Although there is no ban in Nebraska, if you vacation in areas where there is a ban and the label on your child's sleepwear reads "Use phosphate detergents," the best advice is to use non-phosphate heavy duty liquid detergent.

The warning "do not use soaps" does not mean "do not use detergents." Soaps are not recommended because they leave a fat deposit which will build up on the flame retardant fabric.

This fat deposit not only results in loss of flame-retardant properties, but it may also result in stiffness of the fabric.

Other recommendations for laundering flame-retardant fabrics include:

—Do not use bleaches for flame retardant-treated cotton as they render the flame-retardant finishes ineffective. For synthetic fabrics, chlorine bleach may be used.

—Do not commercial laundries. The strong chemicals used in commercial laundries can cause the loss of flame-retardance so flame-retardant fabrics should be home laundered.

—If hard water is prevalent in your area, use detergents which are at least 8 7/8% phosphate.

Lincoln's water is approaching the point considered hard. According to the City Water Department, Lincoln's hard-water factor is 215 parts per million, with 250 parts per million being rated hard and 125 to 130 parts per million considered soft water.

—Do not use hot water. Warm water temperature ranging between 105 and 120 degrees is safe laundering temperature for flame-retardant sleepwear. Hot water may cause shrinking and severe wrinkling of the fabric.

—Do not use fabric softeners. They may build up on flame retardant fabric and cause the garment to lose its flame-retardant properties.

U.S. Consumer Is Under Microscope

By The Associated Press
The American consumer is under a microscope.

Trying to figure out how much people spend, what they buy and why they pick one item instead of another has become a full-time job for some analysts in government and industry.

Several recent surveys are providing additional clues about at least a few American spending patterns and preferences when it comes to eating out.

Inflation and recession have prompted many people to report they are going to restaurants less often. A survey by Yankelovich, Skelly and White, Inc., for General Mills, Inc., found that 45% of those polled said eating out in a nice restaurant was a luxury and 37% said they were saving money by not going to restaurants.

At the same time, however, Census Bureau data indicates January 1975, sales for U.S. eating and drinking establishments were $2.80 billion, 16.6% higher than they were a year earlier. After adjustment for inflation — higher menu prices — the increase was 4.6%, according to the National Restaurant Association.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles the Consumer Price Index, is updating the list of items it checks. The last update was in 1961-62. The new list, based in part on extensive surveys in 1972-73, won't be ready until 1977, but some preliminary results of the latest poll have been released.

Among the findings was that the average American family — 2.9 persons with an income of $10,185 a year — spent $8.15 a week for food away from home during the 1972-73 survey period.

The existing Consumer Price Index already measures increases and decreases in the amount Americans spend at restaurants, snack bars and other eating places.

The bureau checks more than 1,000 outlets in 56 cities, collecting menus and pricing typical breakfasts, lunches and dinners, but the system has some drawbacks.

Fast food chains generally are not included in the outlets checked because they were not a major part of the market in 1961-62 when the list was drawn up. Ethnic restaurants also are not usually checked because their foods don't fit easily into the rather bland menu categories that the Labor Department drew up more than a decade ago.

A spokesman for the Bureau of Labor Statistics conceded that the restaurant segment of the Consumer Price Index may not reflect American eating or spending patterns and said the new checklist being prepared will take some of the changes in taste into account.

The National Restaurant Association, representing more than 125,000 eating establishments, is making its own check of where people eat, how much they spend and why they select one particular restaurant.

The results of the survey haven't been completely compiled, but preliminary findings are available. The association asked more than 3,000 persons how many times they had eaten out in the past week and found that 22.9% said once, 14.9% said twice, 7.6% said three times, 2.7% said four times, 4.2% said five times or more and 47.3% — the largest segment by far — said they hadn't eaten out at all. The remaining .4% didn't answer.

What does it all cost? The restaurant group asked people how much they had spent on prepared food — including lunches at work and take-out snacks — in the past week.

About 13% spent $5 or less, 25% spent between $5 and $9, 30% spent from $9 to $19, 14% spent between $19 and $30 and 10% spent more than $30. The remainder said they spent nothing or answered that they didn't know.

Florida Officer Didn't Fire Gun In Two Decades

Palm Beach Shores, Fla. (AP) — Albert Wolff has been police chief of this south Florida town for 20 years but has never drawn his revolver from the holster.

In fact, he says he has touched the gun only once in the line of duty, when he stopped the car of suspected prowlers.

Wolff, 60, said he had his hand on his gun's butt as he questioned the suspects, who turned out to be innocent young people out for a ride.

"I felt relieved," recalled the chief, who is quitting the force this week.

Backpackers Threatened

The Lincoln Star 9
Monday, May 19, 1975

By DONALD ZOCHERT
(c) Chicago Daily News

Backpacking — The search for self-dependence, solitude and God's own good earth — has become so popular a pastime that it begins to threaten its own reasons for existence.

Foot traffic through America's backcountry has become so heavy in some areas that the agencies responsible for administering the nation's wilderness — the National Park Service and the Forest Service — are gradually drawing tight the noose of regulation.

Companies that manufacture lightweight backpacking equipment, once the special province of small-time but dedicated entrepreneurs — backpackers and climbers themselves — are being gobbled up by giant corporations, which are also "into" chemicals, cereal, toy trains and anything else that sells.

Madison Avenue has come to the world of goose down and fishnet underwear.

The newest of the backpacking magazines to hit this growing market opens with a cry: "Let's Spoil it for the Spoilers" and goes on to report the new look along some wilderness trails:

"The fouling of drinking water supplies, general littering, wanton destruction of growing trees, game-painting on living rock, eroding of trails and destruction of terracing and water diversion bars by motor bikes, burning of privies and the defacement and/or destruction of trail signs and shelters."

The slickest of the backpacking magazines, now three years old, began its publishing career with a warning that it did not intend to publish accounts of trips into the wilds — that, after all, would be like waving a red flag at the bull of the populace. It called its readers to a great debate on whether the magazine should be available at corner newsstands or only through subscriptions. Can't we keep this wilderness business a secret, just between us?

If there's an obvious element of elitism in this, it's not without compelling reason. With more than six million backpackers dumping an estimated $400 million on the counter every year for equipment and clothing. The message seems to be clear: This is a big country, but not nearly big enough. The rich may get richer, but the woods are getting messed up.

The time is long past when a lad like John Muir could fling a pack over his shoulder in Indianapolis, catch the train to Louisville, and hike the next thousand miles to the Gulf with nothing to worry about except guerrillas and hunger. For one thing, there may not be a train to Louisville. But there are autos, hamburger stands, vagrancy laws, toll bridges and big cities, impediments of modern times.

The wilderness shrinks, and today's battles to preserve what remains or to extend it take so many years that a healthy streak of fanaticism is necessary to see a fight through. Even at that, the fight is often not for pure wilderness, but for an approximation of wilderness with the hope that time will heal the wounds of logging, highways and human habitation.

Concern about what too many hikers will do to a wilderness is nothing new, but today's numbers make this concern even more urgent.

"The desire of people to get out into this country is accelerating faster than the ability to manage it," explains Dave Butts, who has worked at Rocky Mountain National Park but who now is stationed in Washington, D.C., with the National Park Service.

In urban parks heavy use can be repaired each year by reseeding grass, replacing sod and providing regular maintenance. It's a little different in the wilderness, where access for maintenance crews is difficult and where the effects of overuse are residual.

"The problem is really one of sheer numbers," Butts says.

"They start by beating out the vegetation along a trail. And wherever there's a focal point — a lake, a campground — that takes a beating, too.

"Plants have only a few months to produce their full growth, and in some areas the visiting season starts before the vegetation begins to grow and ends after the plants stop." The result is mud, mess and eventual erosion of the trail. A good example of this, Butts remarks, can be found near snowfields in the mountains.

"The ground around a snowfield is saturated with water. It settles in, or it runs off clear.

"But let's say you're from a big city and you're out in the Rockies in the summer. There's nothing like a snowball fight in the summertime, right? So you charge up a slope to a snowfield. It doesn't take too many people leaving the trail to churn up this area into a real quagmire."

This year, the park service is launching a pilot program aimed at strengthening its control over the use of wilderness areas in its jurisdiction.

A computer codable permit system will be used in six parks — Rocky Mountain, Great Smoky Mountain, Glacier, Guadalupe in New Mexico, Saguaro National Monument in Arizona and Olympia in Washington State. Each backpacker will be required to tell park authorities where he is going in the park, how long he will be, and where he will camp in the evening if he is in for an overnight stay.

The permit will be attached to the back of the hiker's pack, where it will be visible not only to rangers but to other hikers, who, one imagines, will then be able to put the finger on anyone who is not on his flight plan or who is camping in the "wrong" place.

The system will give park authorities solid information on where people go in a wilderness, what trails and campsites are most used, and will let them bar the gate when the traffic gets too heavy.

It all seems like the sort of rigid order that backpackers are supposedly hiking away from.

"There's no doubt that they object to the regimentation," Butts admits. "I do, too, in fact. But at the same time, you have two alternatives. Either you have some sort of regimentation, as easy as possible, to assure a reasonable level of use and guarantee that the numbers are controlled. Or you turn it loose.

"Then when you get there you wish you hadn't."

Dick Joy, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service in Washington, also reports a general increase in wilderness use for the last 10 years — "most of which is in the form of backpacking."

In California, the Forest Service has established a wilderness permit system providing controlled access to the San Geronimo Wilderness, the San Jacinto Wilderness and a portion of the John Muir Wilderness, Joy said.

The latter provides a good example of what occurs when an area becomes too popular.

The most popular ascent route to California's Mt. Whitney runs through the Muir Wilderness on the east side of the Sierras, a trail that takes two days to hike and which has only two or three campsites, Joy says.

In the past, up to 1,000 backpackers headed up that trail in a single day. The sanitation problem at the campsites — to take only one aspect of the problem — became unbearable, like camping on the site of a winter-long dog convention.

Now, a reservation and permit system is in operation, with a maximum of 75 hikers a day allowed to leave the trailhead.

The California State Parks also operate on a reservation system — with a small portion of campsites available on a first-come basis, and a few years ago the National Park Service itself tried and then abandoned a reservation system for roadside camping areas.

If California is the future, this may be the future of wilderness backpacking as well — with every hiker tagged, branded and beeping from an implanted electrode, followed about by fluorescent scanners, and getting zapped when he takes an unprogrammed turn.

This overstates the case, of course, for not all wilderness areas are over-used, and those hikers who still value self-dependence, solitude and God's own good earth are turning more and more to off-season hiking.

There are still great places to hike — places where the silence of the forest is overwhelming, places where the sunlight breaks through the canopy of trees in faint, golden shafts of light, places when breakers of cold water rush and rush and rush against broken, granite rock, making new earth.

But you won't read about them here. You'll have to find them for yourself.

Arizona Schnorrs Object To Moocher Label

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column about people who were always mooching rides, and these moochers were called "schnorrs."

I would like to know where that term came from. We are one of the 200 families in the United States with the name of "Schnorr," and we object to the use of our name with such a meaning.

We hope that the Schnorr families in Oregon, New Mexico, Illinois and all the other states feel as we do and that you get 199 more letters of protest. Thank you.

THE SCHNORRS OF ARIZONA
DEAR SCHNORRS: The verb

"to beg" is "schnorren" in German. From it comes the noun, "schnorrer" — which means "a beggar, a panhandler, a moocher, a cheapskate, a chiseler, a bum, a drifter, or a borrower. It can also mean a compulsive bargain hunter, bargainer or an impudent indigent."

The above information was "schnorred" (borrowed without permission) from "The Joys of Yiddish" — a delightful and authoritative book written by Leo Rosten.

DEAR ABBY: I have also had it with schnorrs who mooch rides. But when an acquaintance calls and asks if I'm going to a certain affair and I say I am, she immediately asks, "May I ride with you?" Then what do I say?

My greatest objection to these freeloaders is the loss of my personal freedom of movement. I can neither arrive nor leave an event at my own convenience. And I can't choose the route I will take. Even though I may be downtown shopping, I must leave my home because one habitual rider lives near me.

I must also wait until the end of the affair, or until my riders have finished visiting with their friends — not a chance of leaving a few minutes early to stop at the market or do a few errands because I must deliver my riders to their homes promptly.

My car is a two-door. One hefty freeloader who had trouble getting into my back seat said, "When you get a new car, will you please get a four-door?" I wish I had had the nerve to say, "Like fun I will. My next car will be a two-seater!"

WHAT TO DO?

DEAR WHAT: Some people actually enjoy providing others with rides, but since you so obviously consider it an imposition when you're asked, simply say, "I may not be leaving from home." (True, you may not.) Or, "I may not be going directly home afterward." (Also true.)

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a Mama's boy. Mama lives 1,500 miles away, but she writes to Sonny regularly three times a week. And Sonny calls her every Sunday. (He even asks her how he should vote.)

He is 64 and Mama is 79. I know she can't last forever, but what happens to a Mama's boy when Mama is no longer around to tell him what to do?

DEAR SICK: If he's still a Mama's boy at 64, he missed the last boat to manhood, so he'll probably look for another Opening lead — six of spades.

This deal was played in the 1930s, which may account for some of the peculiar bids that led to six clubs doubled.

Declarer was Waldemar von Zedtwitz, New York star whose name has been closely associated with virtually every facet of contract bridge from the time the game was invented in 1926 to this very day.

West led a spade, taken with the king, and East returned the jack of hearts. Von Zedtwitz finessed the queen and played the three of clubs. When West played the deuce, declarer played the four from dummy!

The finesse succeeded, as seemed likely from the bidding, and from this point forward declarer had smooth sailing. He cashed the ace of hearts, led a diamond to dummy, ruffed a heart with the queen, led the seven of clubs and finessed the nine, ruffed dummy's last heart with the ace, and trumped a spade in dummy.

The K-J of clubs drew West's remaining trumps, and the A-K of diamonds won the last two tricks. Six clubs bid and made for 1,090 points!

Declarer could not have made the slam without taking the deep trump finesse at trick three. Finessing the four of clubs was by no means just a fancy play — it was an absolute essential.

West could have thrown a spanner into the works by playing the six of clubs at trick three instead of the deuce, but this does not diminish the luster of von Zedtwitz's play once he got the chance to finesse the four. Taking advantage of defensive lapses is an important part of the game.

Ak-Sar-Ben Close To $3 Million Handle Day?

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — When will Ak-Sar-Ben have its first $3 million mutual handle day?

"I'm only guessing, but I think we should have one in about three years," said veteran Ak-Sar-Ben mutual manager Peck Jones. "But before we could do that, we'd have to have a larger plant."

Jones estimated the mutual staff would need "40 or 50" more sellers and 30 more cashiers. On Saturdays, Ak-Sar-Ben employs 260 sellers and 140 cashiers.

"To do $3 million, we'd need a real good race card with quality horses and also good weather," Jones said. "What attracts people to the races are good horses. We can grow to a $3 million day, but I'm sure we'd need more mutual hands and also more people in the money room."

"The time is coming when we will do $3 million in one day," he said.

Despite a combination of poor weather and the devastating tornado that struck the Omaha area on May 6, Ak-Sar-Ben's mutual handle is higher than last year with fewer persons.

Through the first 15 days of this year's 56-day meet, the average daily mutual handle was $1,037,502 — an increase of 2.13 per cent over last year's $1,015,857. But the average crowd of 13,355 is 5.15 per cent down from last year's 14,080.

Ak-Sar-Ben handled $1,559,772, $1,539,154 and $1,678,025 on the meet's first three Saturdays. Although those figures were higher than the corresponding days of last year, Omaha officials had hoped for even higher totals.

Nevertheless, Jones still foresees three $2 million days this season — on June 28 (the date of the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes), on

Peck Jones
Sees $3 Million

July 5 (the date of the $100,000-added Cornhusker Handicap), and on closing day July 12 when the $50,000 President's Cup is scheduled.

"Having a $2 million day is still real good, but there's really no limit to how big Ak-Sar-Ben can grow," he noted. "The growth of the town and the surrounding towns will help the handle. How much new industry and the growth of the adjoining states will also help."

"When I first came here in 1940, we averaged $91,086 a day. Last year we did the best ever with $1,130,134," Jones said. "I think we can average $1,250,000 this year."

Jones recalled the day Ak-Sar-Ben handled $212,372 in 1941. "It was real hectic for those times," he said.

"The day I really remember was July 4, 1942, when we did $259,441 which was the first time the track ever did more than a quarter-of-a-million. In fact, no other day that meet did over $200,000," he said.

"All the others were between $80,000 and $140,000," he continued. "It's funny, but it seems like it was more work then to handle that much than today because the size of the plant has increased so much."

Jones listed three milestones for Ak-Sar-Ben's mutual handle:

—July 4, 1959, when the Omaha track first did $1 million a day with $1,038,598.

—July 5, 1974 when Ak handled $1,666,823. It was the first time above 1½ million.

—July 13, 1974 when Ak topped the $2 million figure with $2,151,999.

"Who knows? It (a $3 million day) could come sooner than three years," he said.

Barry Cites Persistence In Win

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — "This team doesn't know what it is to quit," observed Golden State's Rick Barry after the Warriors had battled back from a 16-point third-period deficit and beaten the favored Washington Bullets 101-95 in the first game of the National Basketball League's championship playoff series.

It was not unusual for the Warriors, who often have been lightly regarded. They have been coming from behind virtually all season, overcoming tremendous odds. And most times, they have done it with major assistance from their reserves.

Sunday's nationally-televased game was a perfect example. "Phil Smith and Charley Dudley were the guys most responsible for our winning today said the gracious Barry, the Warriors high-scorer with 24 points.

Golden State Coach Al Attles went even further, adding the name of Derrek Dickey to those who sparked the Warriors shocking comeback.

Those three reserves, along with Barry and Clifford Ray, were in the game in the third period when the Warriors began chopping at the Bullets' 56-40 advantage.

The rally was a facsimile of their comeback against the Chicago Bulls in the final game of the Western Conference title series. In that game, they trailed by 14 points in the second period, but came on to win 83-79.

"We don't back down from anybody," said Barry. "I'm not surprised by anything this team does anymore. We've been doing it all season.

"We realize that we're not a great team. But we always feel we can go out and beat anybody."

"After halftime (when the Warriors trailed 54-40) we went out there and said to ourselves, 'We've been down before, so why can't we do it (bounce back) again.'"

"I felt all along we could come back," added Attles, who has provided the Warriors with the inspirational leadership they have needed to overcome their admitted lack of talent.

The surprising victory put the irrepressible Warriors in a strong position in the best-of-seven series since games two and three will be played in San Francisco Tuesday and Friday night.

Smith, the lesser publicized of the Warriors' two rookies, was the catalyst. With starters Charlie Johnson and Butch Beard on the bench, Smith ran the Warriors' offense as Golden State fought back to trail by one, 72-71, at the end of the third period.

Then with the score 80-80 early in the fourth quarter the Warriors went ahead for good on field goals by rookie Keith Wilkes, Dudley and Smith.

The closest favored Bullets came after that was 97-95 on a free throw by Elvin Hayes. But a jump shot by Barry and two foul shots by Smith in the closing minutes completed the scoring and sent the Warriors home in front.

Barry led the Warriors with 24 points and Smith, who had averaged only 7.7 during the regular season and 5.0 in the playoffs, finished with 20.

Ray contributed 16 rebounds while Wilkes, the NBA's Rookie of the Year, had 16 points and 15 rebounds.

Hayes topped the Bullets with 29 points, and Phil Chenier scored 20.

A big factor in the Bullets' downfall was the absence of Kevin Porter for most of the last three periods. Porter, the NBA's assists leader and the Bullets' clever playmaker, scored 13 points in the opening quarter when Washington raced to a 27-17 lead. But he incurred his third personal foul early in the second quarter and spent most of the rest of the game on the bench. He eventually fouled out with just under four minutes remaining.

Tucker Wins Midwest Opener

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Kent Tucker thought it was all alone on the track and it was only a matter of time before he grabbed the checkered flag in the 25-lap main super stock feature race as Midwest Speedway opened its stock car racing season Sunday night.

Tucker, who won the last four races of the 1974 season, roared to an early half-lap lead over Bill Meyers and Al Humphrey and appeared on his way to an easy win.

But Meyers found a lower groove on the new ¾-mile track and started to gain on Tucker with 10 laps to go, bringing the packed crowd to its feet.

Meyers pulled even after closing Tucker out on the first turn but the driver from Aurora was able to out-drag Meyers on the straight to keep the lead.

Then, with only three laps to go and Meyers right behind Tucker's car the yellow flag came out making the single file start most important to both drivers.

Tucker, however, jammed his foot to the floor and pulled just one car length ahead and held on for the win.

"I thought I was all alone," said Tucker. "I didn't realize that he was that close to me until I saw him right beside me."

"I was kind of taking it easy and was just trying to hold on for the win. I didn't want to try a new groove because the one I was in worked fine," said Tucker.

"He was in a lower groove that I hadn't tried and when he pulled even with me I went to the bottom and figured that he wouldn't be able to pass me on the outside because it was so slick," Tucker said.

Meyers, an IMCA regular, knew that Tucker was the man to beat after he had beaten Meyers in the third heat and the trophy dash.

"I had been working well on the bottom of the track since last week in Lexington And with the new track here my car was even working better down there," said Meyers.

"With a couple of more brakes I might have beaten him. But I guess that's what racing is all about," said the Grand Island native.

Ron Boelter, who finished second to Sam Bruscoe in both the hobby stock first heat and the trophy dash, got a break when Bruscoe dropped out of the main hobby feature.

Boelter, a Lincolnite, won the 12-lap race edging Ken Korch also of Lincoln.

Other heat winners included Bob Loll and Dan Watts in the hobby stocks and Rex Nun and Al Humphrey in the super stocks.

Tom Scheffert, of Dorchester, provided one of the most exciting finishes as he won the "B" hobby feature by putting Hap Terrill's car between his and the rail as the two cars came down the stretch for the checkered flag.

Humm Set For Game

Lubbock, Tex. (UPI) — Texas Tech's David Knaus and Nebraska's David Humm will play for coach Grant Teaff's West team in the 15th annual Coaches All-American football game scheduled June 15 in Jones Stadium.

Humm, a 6-2, 186-pound quarterback for the Cornhuskers, was all-American and all-conference in 1974. He led the Big Eight in passing with 1,435 yards and 12 touchdowns.

With Humm at the controls, Nebraska posted a 27-7 record in three seasons, including bowl wins over Notre Dame (1973 Orange), Texas (1974 Cotton) and Florida (1974 Sugar).

During his career, Humm had one national record (15 straight completions), four Big Eight records, including 42 touchdown passes and seven Nebraska records.

Master Derby May Pass Belmont

Cincinnati (AP) — Master Derby, longest winner of Saturday's richest-ever Preakness Stakes, reportedly may pass up the Belmont Stakes to enter the $100,000 Ohio Derby, according to his trainer, Smiley Adams.

Master Derby, a 23-1 choice, outlasted favored Foolish Pleasure by one length to claim $159,100 of the total purse of $210,600.

"It's not that we don't want to meet Foolish Pleasure again," Adams told The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"But Mrs. Verna Lehmann, owner of Master Derby, is originally from Ohio and she would like to run the colt in the Ohio Derby."

The Ohio Derby is scheduled June 15, a week after the Belmont.

"If we went into the Belmont Stakes we'd have to put up a supplementary fee," explained Adams. "He's not nominated for that race."

Master Derby was shipped Sunday to Louisville for a couple of days rest.

The Washington Bullets' Kevin Porter scores two points by going between the Golden State Warriors' Charlie Johnson (10) and Butch Beard (21).

New Orleans Victory To Confident Casper

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There was never a doubt in his mind, said Billy Casper, that he would win again.

"Oh, no, not at all," the portly, placid 43-year-old veteran said Sunday after his front-running, two-stroke triumph in the New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

"Certainly not this year. The swing has been too good. I knew I would win again, it was just a matter of time. Actually, I won two tournaments in Europe last year, on consecutive weeks, so I knew it would happen again."

Still, it had been almost two full seasons since his last American triumph and victory was sweet indeed for the man who led all the way in this event.

"It feels pretty good," said Casper, who reeled off a string of three consecutive birdies down the stretch, shot a solid, two-under-par 70 in the last round and claimed the 51st victory of his long career with a 271 total, a distant 17-under-par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

"That's what did it," Casper said. "Those three birdies kind of did it. I'd three-putted twice on the front side and that sort of makes you a little panicky."

It was capped off with a six-iron shot to within three feet of the cup on the 13th hole and all but nailed it down.

Gangling 6-foot-5 Peter Oosterhuis of England, who finished second, once closed to within two strokes of the lead, but the front-running Casper put him away with a decisive birdie string that began on the 11th hole.

That gave Casper a fourstroke lead and tournament officials put his name on the winner's check when there were still four holes to go in the mild, sunny weather.

Casper, who collected only $2,800 when he won this tournament in 1958, gained $30,000 from the total purse of $150,000 and pushed his earnings for the year to $83,068.

More importantly, perhaps, it virtually clinched him a position on the 12-man Ryder Cup team that will play Britain's best in Ligonier, Pa., this fall.

"Making the Ryder Cup team was one of my big goals for the year," Casper said. "I've been on it every time since 1961, and I kind of wanted to keep the string going."

Casper, who has the happy history of extremely good play when he isn't feeling well, actually withdrew from this tournament when he was stricken with a stomach virus on Monday. He recinded the withdrawal the following day, said he was still ailing on Wednesday, but shared the lead on Thursday, pulled in front alone on Friday and took it from there.

Oosterhuis, in his first full season of competition on the American tour, managed a 68 and 273 for second.

Clarke's Advice Helps Flyers Win

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An enthusiastic recommendation made by Bobby Clarke last spring returned another tidy dividend Sunday afternoon when the Philadelphia Flyers moved closer to completing a successful defense of their Stanley Cup.

Philadelphia management approached Clarke, the team captain, to ask him if he thought Reg Leach could be of any help to the Flyers. Clarke, a teammate of Leach for three years in junior A hockey at Flin Flon, provided a rapid one-word endorsement.

"I told them 'definitely,'" Clarke said Sunday. "I then told them he was a good hockey player and would help whoever he played with."

The Flyers acquired Leach from California. He scored 45 goals during the regular season, and Sunday he took a pass from his old friend, Clarke, to score the first goal as Philadelphia edged the Buffalo Sabres 2-1 to take a 2-0 edge in games in their championship series.

"I figured Clarke would get the puck and I placed myself in front of the net about 25 feet out," Leach said of his goal which broke a scoreless deadlock at 3:24 of the second period. "I shot with one motion and just caught the left side of the net."

After big defenseman Jerry Korab tied the score for the Sabres 2:18 deep into the final period, Clarke settled the issue barely 4½ minutes later when he slipped a backhand past goalie Gerry Desjardins during a power play.

"(Rick) MacLeish passed the puck to (Bill) Barber and when the defenseman went up to get him I was open," Clarke related. "I had my back to him (Desjardins). I don't know what he was doing."

Bernie Parent then protected the margin the rest of the session to register his third consecutive one-goal game.

Clarke, held to two goals in the preliminary rounds of the playoffs, now has five points in the first two games of this series and, as a result, the Flyers will enjoy a 2-0 advantage when the best-of-seven series resumes

Tuesday night in Buffalo.

In losing, the Sabres continued their jinx of never having won in the Spectrum in 15 games, dating back to their first five years ago. In addition, the Sabres have never beaten Parent.

Parent, who now has allowed only one goal in each of his last three playoff games, was credited with 18 saves and held up after Buffalo removed Desjardins for an extra attacker in the last minute.

The Sabres, boasting one of the most awesome attacks in the National Hockey League, have had 11 power play chances in the two final games but have converted only one.

TRACK

Distance runner Jim Ryan said he thought his eight-year-old record for the mile run would have been broken long before it was. Ryan held the record at 3:51.1 until it was broken Saturday night by Filbert Bayi of Tanzania who ran the mile in 3:51.0.

Ralph Mann ran the world's fastest 400-meter intermediate hurdle race of 1975 (49.1) and then helped the Beverly Hills Striders record the fastest mile relay mark (3:05.8) of the year at the Bakersfield (Calif.) Track Classic Saturday night.

CAR RACING

Rain and fog forced a halt to the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race after 140 laps Sunday with Benny Parsons in the lead with a Chevrolet.

Rookie Jerry Sneva of Spokane, Wash., escaped injury Sunday morning in a crash during practice for the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

TENNIS

Ismail El Shafei defeated Balazs Taroczy of Hungary, 9-7, 6-2, 15-13 to pull Egypt into a 2-2 tie with Hungary in their European Zone B quarterfinal Davis Cup match.

Bjorn Borg whipped Hans-Juergen Pohmann and Birger Andersson upset Karl Meiler to give Sweden a 3-2 victory over West Germany and a berth in the European Zone A Davis Cup semifinals.

Manuel Orantes of Spain swept into the finals of the $84,000 Hard Court Tennis Championship Sunday at Bournemouth, England. He defeated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-2, 6-2 to meet France's Patrick Proisy on Monday.

BASEBALL

Frank Robinson of the Cleveland Indians has been suspended and fined for an altercation with umpire Jerry Neudecker in Saturday night's 10-1 loss to Chicago.

Robinson, however, has appealed the suspension so it will not be invoked until a hearing has been held by American League president Lee MacPhail.

The Oakland A's acquired infielder Teddy Martinez from the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for minor league pitcher Steve Staniland and a player to be named later.

BOXING

John Conteh, Britain's world light heavyweight champion, will meet Alvaro Lopez of Stockton, Calif., in a non-title 12-round bout on Tuesday at Wembley Empire Pool in London.

Alberto Morales scored an upset 10-round split decision victory over world flyweight champion Erbito Salavarría of the Philippines in a non-title fight Saturday night.

Belgian heavyweight champion Jean-Pierre Cooman beat Terry Daniels when the Texan was disqualified in the seventh round for butting. Daniels explained the butt by saying "That's the way we are boxing in the states." The fight was held in Antwerp, Belgium.

OTHER SPORTS

At least two Southern Methodist football players have been suspended from the team for refusing to take a lie-detector test as part of a probe into drug use in the athletic dormitory, according to a Dallas newspaper.

Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau said even if work gets underway this week on the strikebound site of the 1976 Olympics, the wildest walkout will increase an already forecasted $250 million deficit for the summer games.

"Everything is going fine in our little town," said the Rev. J. Bernard Fell, executive director of the Lake Placid Organizing Committee at Lake Placid, N.Y., chosen site of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

New York State Assemblyman William F. Passanante says he has introduced a bill which would authorize quarterhorse racing at existing thoroughbred tracks in New York.

Three days of meetings begin Monday for Atlantic Coast Conference officials.

UNO Captures Women's CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The University of Nebraska at Omaha won the seventh annual Women's College Softball World Series Sunday by defeating the University of Northern Iowa 6-4 in a playoff game.

UNO defeated Northern Iowa 1-0 in a Saturday game but the Iowans, after ousting Michigan 7-3, defeated the Mavericks 11-1 Sunday to set up the playoff game in the double elimination tourney.

Defending champion Southwest Missouri State failed to reach the tournament.

Barr Blanks Cardinals

By The Associated Press

Jim Barr came within Lou Brock of a no-hitter Sunday but had to settle for a 2-0, two-hit San Francisco victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Brock broke up the no-hit bid with a single off Barr's glove in the seventh and also got the Cards' only other hit, a single in the ninth. The San Francisco right-hander faced just 29 batters, two above the minimum, in raising his record to 4-3. He walked three and struck out six.

Bobby Murcer drove in the first Giant run with a sacrifice fly in the fifth and Willie Montanez tripled and scored the second one on Chris Speier's single in the sixth.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh defeated Los Angeles 7-2, Philadelphia downed Atlanta 5-1, Cincinnati defeated Montreal 6-1, Houston ripped New York 12-7 and Chicago shaded San Diego 3-2.

In the American League, California dumped Baltimore 5-1, New York blasted Oakland 9-1, Boston beat Kansas City 4-2, Minnesota blanked Milwaukee 6-0, Cleveland edged out Chicago 7-6 and Texas outlasted Detroit 7-6 in 11 innings.

Lefty Ken Brett stopped Los Angeles on two hits—a homer and single by Dave Lopes—and collected three himself, including two doubles, for Pittsburgh. Rookie Tom Underwood hurled a four-hitter and Mike Anderson had a pair of run-scoring singles as the Phillies won their seventh straight game.

Gary Nolan stopped Montreal on four hits and Pete Rose and George Foster belted home runs for Cincinnati. Bob Watson hit a home run and double and drove in five runs, as Houston ended the Mets' winning streak in five games. Adrian Garrett's three-run homer, his first of the year, lifted Ray Burris, 5-2 and Chicago past San Diego.

Nolan Ryan, with last out relief help from Don Kirkwood, raised his record to 8-1 and Lee Stanton slammed a three-run double for California. Catfish Hunter beat his former mates with a four-hitter and Thurman Munson hit a home run for the Yankees.

Bernie Carbo drove in all four Boston runs with a pair of homers to back the six-hit pitching of Rick Wise. Rookie Jim Hughes blanked Milwaukee on four hits and Steve Braun and Larry Hise hit home runs for Minnesota.

Boog Powell and George Hendrick hit two-run homers and relievers Tom Buskey and Dave LaRoche put down a Chicago rally for Cleveland. Tom Grieve, getting a second chance after outfielder Leon Roberts dropped his foul fly ball, singled home the winning run in the 11th for Texas.

Yungblut, Washington Compared

There are some similarities between Lincoln High's Mike Washington and former Scottsbluff High standout Steve Yungblut and there are also some differences.

Yungblut, now a deputy county attorney in Lincoln, was the first high school athlete in Nebraska to throw the shot put 60-0 and Washington was the second.

Yungblut achieved his effort (60-1) in the Sidney Invitational after scratching on a 59-plus put in 1965. Washington topped that mark by one inch May 9 in Papillion on his second try.

Neither athlete was expecting to throw 60 feet when they did, yet it helped highlight their senior year after disappointing football seasons.

Washington admits not having as good a senior year as a fullback and linebacker for the Links as expected, while Yungblut, also a fullback and linebacker, separated his shoulder during the first week of practice and only played in four games.

Both athletes worked hard in practice, used technique as much as possible and were well coached. Wayne Binfield, now retired, was Yungblut's coach and he led the Bearcats when they were a state track power.

Washington Bigger

The 5-11½, 225-pound Washington does have a size advantage on Yungblut, who competed at 6-0, 205.

Washington uses the Randy Matson style, while Yungblut used the Perry O'Brien. And Yungblut had little weight training, mainly because not much was known about combining weight lifting with the shot put in Nebraska high schools 10 years ago.

Washington uses weight training extensively and can bench press about double what Yungblut could. "I wasn't as strong as Mike and only had one or two good puts in a meet," Yungblut recalls.

"Mike almost has a good throw every time, but I sure was surprised that 10 years past before someone else threw 60 feet."

In between Yungblut and Washington there have been several potential 60-foot high school shot putters in the state — Wahoo's Steve Manstedt, Grand Island's Jim Beltzer, Lincoln High's Mike Fultz and Hastings' Henry Dilly to name a few.

However, the 60-foot put eluded them. "I thought once 60 feet was reached it would be easier for others, because the psychological barrier was also broken," Yungblut says.

But the psychological barrier can also work against an athlete. Yungblut admits "An athlete can try too hard and be too tense to do his best," he notes.

Yungblut thinks one of the big reasons he and Washington had their 60-foot puts when they did was because they were relaxed and not expecting to throw 60 feet.

Yungblut's best throw in competition other than his 60-1 was a 58-10 in the Scottsbluff Relays. Then came a 10-year wait for the next 60-foot put by a Nebraska high school athlete, which according to the experts takes an almost perfect put with the right athlete and did at Papillion with Washington.

Stander Gets Bench Parole

Council Bluffs, Iowa (UPI) — Professional boxer Ron Stander, who fought for the heavyweight title three years ago, has been given a bench parole after being sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Stander, 30, who was sentenced Friday by District Judge Leroy Johnson, had pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering The charge was filed in connection with a break-in here at an adult book store.

Judge Johnson ignored a plea from Stander's attorney for a deferred sentence, saying he could not grant the request because Stander had been charged with using a gun in an earlier conviction.

Omaha Trips Iowa, 4-1

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Designated hitter Gary Martz homered with the bases empty and drove in two more runs with a bases loaded single Sunday as the Omaha Royals defeated Iowa 4-1 in American Association baseball.

Omaha scored an unearned run in the second when Ruppert Jones singled in Martz who had reached second on an error. But the Oaks tied it two innings later when Roe Skidmore hit his second home run of the series.

Martz's sixth homer of the season came in the bottom of the fourth.

Tom Bruno won his second game against one loss with the help of Norm Angelini's second save in three days.

Two More Quality Blasts For Indy Lineup

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Only two Johnny-come-lately's, Tom Bigelow and rookie Eldon Rasmussen, made successful qualifying runs late Sunday to complete the second-fast lineup in Indianapolis "500" history.

Nine unsuccessful attempts to break into the 33-car lineup were made, including three in two different cars by former track record holder Jim Hurtubise.

The starting field, which will get one more opportunity to tune its engines in practice in Thursday's carburetion tests, averaged 185.057 miles per hour — 2.2 miles faster than last year.

However, the speed fell considerably short of the 1973 record of 192.3 established before the rules were changed to reduce engine power and the size of stabilizer wings.

Bigelow, Whitewater, Wis., averaged 181.864 m.p.h. to eliminate a car qualified last week by Rick Muther. Laguna Beach, Calif. Rasmussen, Indianapolis, the fourth "500" newcomer in the field averaged 181.910, ousting a car qualified by Al Loquasto, Easton, Pa.

Loquasto was the first driver in a different car hoping to regain a spot in the field when the time ran out.

Both Rasmussen and Bigelow made the field on their second attempt.

Other unsuccessful attempts in qualifying were made by New Zealand's Graham McRae and rookie Billy Scott, San Bernardino, Calif. Both had two tries.

Scott, the last driver on the track hoping to make the field, blew the engine on his qualifying attempt coming out of the No. 4 turn and spun into the outside wall, but he escaped injury.

In the only other accident on the final day of the time trials, conducted in brilliant sunshine and 80-degree temperatures, rookie Jerry Sneva, Spokane, Wash., hit the wall in morning practice but also escaped unhurt.

Hurtubise, the former New York state driver now living in Indianapolis who competed in the "500" 10 times, blew the engine on the car he was assigned to originally during a qualifying run. He made two unsuccessful in another machine.

U.S. Track Team Romps Chinese

CANTON, Peoples Republic of China (UPI) — Friendship, not competition, was supposed to be the keynote of an historic first-ever track meet between the United States and the Peoples Republic of China Sunday, and Uncle Sam's forces went along with that perfectly by turning the competition into a nice friendly romp with 14 victories in 15 events.

Rain delayed the start of the meet twice for a period of nearly two hours, but Al Lanier, a lanky, 24-year-old long jumper from Cincinnati, set the tone for the event before it even got under way. Taking a practice lap on the 10,000 capacity East Stadium under track while it was still raining, Lanier found himself joined by a pair of Chinese runners on both sides. In an impulsive gesture of pure friendship, he reached one hand out to both and the three of them ran a complete lap together with their hands joined aloft. The crowd ate it up, applauding loudly.

"Since the general theme of the meet was friendship, I just felt I wanted to do it," said Lanier, who finished runnerup to teammate Tommy Haynes of Nashville, Tenn., in the long jump. "It was strictly an impulsive thing, that's all."

Actually, the Chinese did not field their first team. The majority of those who competed came from the Central and South provinces with only a dozen being members of China's national team, which the Americans will compete against in Peking, May 27-28. The U.S. today will go against the same group they beat so one-sidedly Sunday and against another provincial second-team squad in Shanghai, May 23-24. No point scores are being kept in any of the three meets because they are supposed to be purely good-will affairs, free of any political overtones.

In that regard, there were no Chinese or American flags displayed at the stadium Sunday, nor were the anthems of either nation played.

The only thing smacking of any nationalistic nature was a huge sign above the stands in the center section of the stadium which read:

The other rookies in the lineup are Bill Puterbaugh, Indianapolis; Sheldon Kinser, Bloomington, Ind.; and Larry McCoy, Langhorne, Pa. Puterbaugh and Kinser were first weekend qualifiers while McCoy made the field Saturday.

There was little activity on the famed 2 1/2-mile oval early in the day as the track temperature rose to 140 degrees under the blistering sun. Only one hour and 15 minutes remained before the usually frantic last-day attempts to break into the lineup were launched by various crews.

"Long live the friendship between the people and athletes of China and those countries of the world."

So mindful of the friendship aspect of the meet was U.S. coach Bob Gegengack, he even tried to soft peddle his squad's one-sided rout somewhat.

"The less said about it, the better," he said. "I thought the meet was very well conducted."

On the other hand, Ou Wei Tan, the Chinese coach, said he wasn't overly surprised by the American's tremendous superiority.

"I expected it," he said. "I am deeply impressed by the friendship between the athletes. We hope to raise our standard of skill so that our ordinary athletes can compete on a general international level in three or four years."

Pressed as to his feeling about the Peoples Republic of China being admitted into the Olympics, the Chinese coach said that could not be as long as Taiwan is a participating member.

Fred Newhouse of Baton Rouge, La., had the distinction of becoming the first American runner ever to score a victory on Chinese soil when he won the 400 meters in 47.4 seconds. He wasn't aware he had made history with his victory.

"It never dawned on me," he said. "Now that I've won, I'll be very proud to go into the history books."

Other U.S. winners were two-time Olympian Willie Davenport of Baton Rouge, who overcame a slow start to take the 110 meter hurdles in 14.2 seconds, Don Merrick of Deland, Fla., winner of the 200 meters in 20.8, Mike Manley, Eugene, Ore., in the 3,000 meter steeplechase with a clocking of 8:38.8, Charles Maguire, Foxboro, Mass., in the 10,000 meters with a time of 29:57.6, Dick Drescher, Greenbelt, Md., in the discus throw, 191 feet, 7 inches, Peter Shmook, San Jose, Calif., shotput, 65 feet, 2 inches, and Milan Tiff, West Los Angeles, Calif., triple jump, 53 feet, 7 3/4 inches.

With the track wet and treacherous from the rain, nobody came close to a record time.

Trainer Leroy Jolley Blasts Officials

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Trainer Leroy Jolley, still brooding over Foolish Pleasure's second place finish to Master Derby in Saturday's 100th Preakness Stakes, blasted the officials of Pimlico Race Course Sunday, blaming them for ending any chances his horse had of winning the Triple Crown.

"This track has been bad for 100 years and they're gonna leave it bad for the next 100 because it might cost money to fix it," fumed Jolley outside Foolish Pleasure's barn. "The dirt was as loose as hell and should have been better cared for. There was no attempt made to tighten it up because everybody was working on something else and not on the track."

"Master Derby loves a dead track, ran a great race and deserved to win but I still say Foolish Pleasure never ran on a track as bad as this."

What also incensed Jolley was what he called "the circus atmosphere" surrounding the track Saturday which was jammed by a record Pimlico crowd of 75,216, including some 35,000 people in the infield area.

"Those goddamn idiots in the infield block the view of the people who paid $25 a seat," said Jolley. "At no time could I see how Foolish Pleasure was handling the track until the stretch and then the horses are running right at you and you can't get a good view."

Jolley also criticized the presence of a team of Clydesdale horses which appeared on the track in ceremonies earlier in the afternoon.

"I don't think 75,000 people came out to see those Budweiser horses," added Jolley. "Those horses are for country fairs. The circus atmosphere doesn't add a thing. The good horses they had running in the race are enough to attract people."

Jolley noted that Foolish Pleasure, despite suffering only the second loss of a 13-race career that includes a victory in the Kentucky Derby earlier this month, came out of the race in fine condition and would probably be entered in the Belmont Stakes, the third leg of the Triple Crown series, June 7.

"One thing I can say about the Belmont," said the 37-year-old Jolley, who has been a trainer since the age of 19, "is that the conditions will be a hell of a lot better and I'm sure they won't have those Budweiser horses."

When informed of Jolley's charges, Chick Lang, the general manager of Pimlico, said, "Leroy Jolley is a very capable trainer but he has to learn to lose more gracefully. When he was beaten in the Florida Derby he also complained about the condition of the track. We spend a lot of time and money on our track. We go overboard on Preakness Day and even hire 15 to 20 extra men."

"You'd think that as long as he's been in the business he'd learn by now. That was a real astute statement about the Budweiser horses. Maybe, he likes Schlitz."

While Foolish Pleasure, along with third place finisher Diabolo, fifth place Avatar and sixth place Singh planned to ship to New York Monday morning, winner Master Derby, who returned a record Preakness win payoff of $48.80 for his one-length victory, headed back for Churchill Downs in Louisville early Sunday morning.

"I won't make up my mind about the Belmont until probably the end of the week," said trainer Smiley Adams. "I just might decide to skip it and freshen him up a bit."

The Preakness was the 21st race of Master Derby's career and the 11th triumph for the son of 1970 Kentucky Derby winner Dust Commander. He had won five races in a row before finishing fourth to Foolish Pleasure in the Derby and was allowed to go off at odds of 23-1 for the Preakness as many people thought his only hope for victory would be on either a muddy or sloppy track.

Sid Martin, the trainer for Diabolo, who now has finished third in both the Derby and the Preakness, felt that the condition of the track, which was listed fast, "didn't mean much to us."

"He lost more ground going around the final turn than he lost by the condition of the track," said Martin, who added that Diabolo would run in the Belmont Stakes.

Martin said he expects a field of seven or eight for the Belmont. Asked if he thought a horse who had not run in the Preakness might take a crack at the Belmont, Martin answered, "None that I know of right now."

Boxing Group Honors Ali As Fighter Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, who is having a busy 1975, was honored Sunday night by the Boxing Writers Association as Fighter of the Year for 1974.

Ali's manager, Herbert Muhammad, was recognized as Manager of the Year at the organization's 50th anniversary dinner and former heavyweight champion Joe Louis was honored as Boxing's Man of the Half Century.

Ali, who outpointed Joe Frazier Jan. 28, 1974, and then regained the title by knocking out George Foreman in Zaire, Africa, Oct. 30, already has fought twice this year and wants to fight three more times.

The champion stopped Chuck Wepner in the 15th round at the Cleveland Coliseum March 24 and last Friday stopped Ron Lyle in the 11th round at Las Vegas, Nev.

Ali has signed to fight Joe Bugner of Britain at Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, June 30 and has said he wants to fight Frazier and Foreman before the year is out.

Serious negotiations for a third Ali-Frazier fight—Frazier won the first one—are underway.

Promoter Don King, who put together Ali's last three fights, said the financial package for the two fighters would be between $11 million and $12 million.

Lope Sorreal Jr., a promoter from Manila, was in Las Vegas to enter The Philippines into the race for an Ali-Frazier bout. Other sites that could land the fight are Cairo, New Orleans, Honolulu and the Dominican Republic, King said.

King also said he is trying to make the Ali-Bugner fight part of a closed-circuit television tripeheader.

It's a cool 60 degrees in antique Lisboa and Our Man in the Mediterranean flew over to cruise in the path of Ulysses, the garrulous Greek.

"At the top of the tree-lined Avenida da Liberdade, the Marquez de Pombal stands in enduring stone looking over the city he rebuilt after the fearful earthquake in 1755.

"A stone lion crouches at his feet. The Marquez was a stony cat. For an attempt on the King's life, he punished the plotters by wiping out two noble families. Right down to the kissing cousins.

"We landed here this morning on a World Airways 747. The plane load — 460 people — will just fill the Golden Odyssey, a new ship operated by Royal Cruise Line of San Francisco."

"Lisbon has exploded politically after many a year of dictatorship. There's a military government but every wall is spray-painted and plastered with slogans of six major political parties.

"Tourist business is off since the rumors of a Communist takeover. Major industries have been nationalized — including travel. General feeling is that the country will adopt a Swedish style of socialism rather than Russia's Communism."

"But the Portuguese business man still goes at a reasonable 11 a.m. to his coffee house. Reads newspapers over tiny cups of coffee that would blow a safe, a third of the cup filled with sugar.

"While we were waiting for the Golden Odyssey to load supplies, we went out to Guincho. (It means the cry of the seagull. And also means 'crazy'.)

"Cannonball Tony Muchaxo runs the seafood restaurant Muchaxo. The thirty-six cannon balls were found in the basement of the old fort when they were building the restaurant."

"He serves all kinds of seafood: Squareface lobsters. A sweet crab. Barnacles called 'percebes' that taste better than they look. (They look like tiny clusters of chicken feet. It was a real hero who ate the first percebes.)

"All these are served with peri peri sauce, a peppery thing from African Angola where they're probably glad to get rid of it. It would raise hair on a Chihuahua.

"Tony cuts it down by mixing peri peri with olive oil, sherry and gin."

"With all this they serve excellent Portuguese wine. A very good local white is Gaeiras. But the Portuguese think there is no wine like the Port.

"They quote an English prof at Cambridge who said: 'Claret would be Port if it could.'"

The English got heavy on Port when the Duke of Wellington — 'The Iron Duke' — started booting Napoleon around here. You can see his fortifications on the edge of the city.

"There's a rhyme by an anonymous Englishman about Port:

'I must have one at eleven.
'It's a duty that must be done.
'If I don't have one at eleven,
'I must have eleven at one.'

"For some time after India seized Portugal's colony of Goa, there were anti-American slogans on the wall. If they're still there, they've been covered up by present political parties.

"The stony Marquez was noted for throwing out Government and clergy free loaders.

"Across the base of the statue someone has chalked: 'Where are you, Marquez, now that we need you? Come back. They are here again.'"

MANGLED TRUCK... top, collided with station wagon.

Lincolnite Dies In Denton Crash

One Lincoln man was killed and one critically injured Sunday evening in a two-car collision six miles east of Denton, deputy sheriffs said.

Daniel Behrms, 28, of 2138 D, died after suffering head injuries in the crash, deputy sheriffs said.

Phillip T. Zimmerman, 28, of Lot 28, 2340 West O, was reported in critical condition at Lincoln General Hospital with head injuries.

The Lancaster County sheriff's office had no details on the collision.

Volunteer firemen of the Southwest Rural Fire Protection District were called to extinguish flames in one of the cars which caught fire after the collision. They said both men were out of the cars when they arrived.

Texas Authorities Seek Sniper

SHERMAN, Tex. (AP) — Police searched Sunday for a sniper who fired on at least seven vehicles — including four chartered buses loaded with junior high school students.

Seven persons were injured, none seriously, in two separate shooting incidents late Saturday and early Sunday. Police said the injured, two of them truck drivers, were treated at a hospital and released.

The shootings occurred along U.S. 75 near this North Texas city.

"We have very little to go on," a police spokesman said Sunday. "We don't know where the shots came from, whether from a vehicle or from a stationary point. We can't really find anything."

The buses carried 177 Foster

Junior High School students and their adult sponsors from Tulsa, Okla. They were on a weekend trip to Six Flags Over Texas, an amusement park at Arlington, midway between Dallas and Fort Worth.

"I heard some glass shatter and thought it was just a balloon in the bus," said Mrs. Linda Barlow, a sponsor on the student bus.

The buses were on the southern edge of Sherman, heading north from Dallas when the shots were fired about 11:30 p.m. Five persons were hurt.

"At first I thought it was a firecracker," said bus driver Lawrence Maynard. "I turned on the lights as soon as it happened and the girls started screaming."

Sherman Detective Jack Driscoll said, "Everyone was extremely lucky. Those holes in the (bus) windows were really large." He speculated the shots came from a high powered rifle with a "starlight" scope.

"We have no description of any person, persons or vehicle. The sniper shot out of pitch darkness. The guy had to be an excellent shot," said Driscoll.

Forty minutes after the buses were fired on, three large tractor-trailer truck rigs were shot at 17 miles south on U.S. 75, officers reported. A police spokesman said the same sniper was believed responsible for both attacks.

A spokesman at Wilson and Jones Memorial Hospital here said of the seven people hurt, six were hit by glass. The seventh, student Ruth Wilson, was pierced through the ear by a bullet.

Victim Of Alliance Shooting Said In Serious Condition

Lincoln Star Special
Scottsbluff—The victim of a shooting incident Friday morning in Alliance was listed in serious condition Sunday evening at West Nebraska General Hospital in Scottsbluff.

Betty Bates, 27, was shot three times with a 1909-vintage .38 caliber revolver in what was described as a possible murder-suicide, said Dick Lloyd, a Box Butte County deputy sheriff.

Lloyd theorized that the woman was shot by Herbert W. Bates, 36, a half-brother of her former husband Bates then shot himself in the temple, Lloyd said.

Lloyd said the FBI is running tests to determine if the incident is actually a murder-suicide, as suspected.

The Bates woman had been listed in extremely poor condition with bullet wounds in the head, chest and stomach.

Lincolnite Says He Was Beaten By Car Tailers

A 31-year-old Lincoln man told police he was beaten in front of his home early Sunday morning by two men who followed his car along Interstate 80 from Omaha.

Darrell A. Bailey, of 1315 K, was treated for cuts to his face and shoulders at Lincoln General Hospital, then released.

Bailey told police the two men passed him several times on the interstate, followed him home and hit him several times when he ran for the front door.

The men drove off after a women got out of their car and asked them to stop hitting him, Bailey said.

Old Farmer's Riddle: Why is a needle like an idle genius? (Answer below.)

For what it may be worth, we can tell you that aboard the old ships where there was much brightwork, they used to use the brine from the beef and pork barrels and coarse canvas.

Home Hint: To remove wallpaper, mix one heaping tablespoon of saltwater and one gallon of hot water. Apply freely to wallpaper, keeping the water hot... Riddle answer: It does not work until pushed.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Monday

Quote from a Gemini which haunts me: "If I am going to be alone, I'd rather be by myself." — Marilyn Monroe. Another Gemini who fits into this category was Judy Garland. Gemini is a many-faceted sign and the natives, though exasperating, contribute to our understanding of the human mind and make our life a joy. Who is your favorite Gemini?

ARIES (March 21-April 19) What seems to be a deliberate obstacle could be a blessing in disguise. Avoid rushing — take time to make plans. Get map and revive sense of direction. Cancer, Capricorn persons play significant roles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You get involved. Nothing occurs halfway. Situation will be hot or cold. No lukewarm. Accent is on love, children, affairs of heart. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could play significant roles. Member of opposite sex lets you stand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) One who seemed capable of "pulling strings" may be playing games. Know it and protect your own interests. Do some double-checking. Tie loose ends. Get to heart of matters. Insist on frankness. Eschew false flattery.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be ready for change. Travel variety. Get lines of communication in order. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Be analytical. Get meanings which are written between the lines. Ask questions and you will obtain answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Check costs. Be a shopper. Avoid extravagance. Insist on quality. Improve home surroundings. Deal with Taurus, Libra persons. One who shares financial interest has something constructive to offer. Be receptive.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22) Arrange — is finalized. Real estate is emphasized. Your security is affected — be sure you check for loopholes. Means protect your own interests. Be especially wary in connection with various legal requirements. Pisces — and another Virgo — are in picture.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22) You get what you asked for — means you have chance now to prove your major point. Capricorn, Cancer persons could figure prominently. Past efforts bear fruit. Emphasis is on work, connection with hospital, special organization or fraternal group.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21) Finish project. Study Libra message. Realize that friend, though sincere, could lack material goods — and connections. What you accomplish will be through your own personal efforts. An Aries could smooth the path. One you recently aided is going to return the favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21) Accident originality. Independence. What you look for granted could be denied. Know it and have alternatives at the ready. There is room for you at top. But you must assert self in direct manner. Make your position crystal-clear.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19) What you hear should be checked. Someone wants something for nothing — at your expense. Know it and do something about it. Means don't pay for proverbial pig in poke. You have a right to see, feel, test and obtain legitimate appraisal.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18) Tax question can be resolved. Budget should be examined in connection with travel plans. Tendency exists for you to scatter forces. Social activity should not be permitted to result in fatigue. Gemini, Sagittarius persons may be involved.

PISCES (Feb 19-March 20) Caution now pays dividends. Means don't rush to conclusions. Your views plans can be revised without loss of face. Know it and act accordingly. Your efforts are being reviewed. Outcome will be favorable.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, original and attractive to opposite sex. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You started new project way of life this year — July will be your most significant month. You let go of past last year — and now you are embarked on adventure of discovery.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is the key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
